STRIKERS WARNED BY ELY

Today

If the Horse Knew
Caught, One Bushmaster
Happy Mr. Hitler
1000 Years a Long Time

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

THE STRIKE situation seems to be a little serious, several killed, many wounded. The President has appointed a mediation committee to mediate, but it is one thing to appoint a committee, another to have workers consent to mediation. The strike leader says:

"First, all the mills in the country must close down. Then we will mediate."

You can't help admiring the devotion of the strike leader to his cause. On the other hand, you must admit that the men who have built the mills, met the payrolls, created the industry, are also entitled to defend their side if they can. It may be a little difficult before the end comes.

It has been said:

"If the horse knew his power, the small boy could not ride him."

That is perfectly true, and labor, which is the horse, long "ridden" by capital, is discovering its power under the new era, and plans to use it.

But there is more involved in the situation than mere "power." If the horse got rid of the small boy on his back and galloped away from the small boy's father's stable, saying to himself and the other horses, "What do I need of them?" he might wake up a week later, disturbed.

He would notice the absence of oats in his manger, and the lack of anybody to "float" his teeth, when they got too long, pare down his hoofs, or pile up fragrant hay in his stall.

He might be a happier horse, after learning to plant and harvest oats and cut and dry hay, but that would take time.

Speaking of hay, farmers, amazed, are told that "making hay while the sun shines" is a mistake. Hay left scattered on the ground to dry in sunshine loses from 35 to 50 per cent of its food value. Sunlight takes out the food value, the nourishing starch from the hay, and the "stock" suffers.

The modern, better method, is to cut the grass green, dry it, artificially, preserving all its value. That costs money, but this professional writer and amateur farmer proposes to try it, and will report results next year.

Dr. Ditmars, of New York's big zoological garden, is happy after twenty-five years trying. He has secured a "bushmaster" six feet long, absolutely vicious. A Trinidad plantation worker found the poisonous monster, thick body, small head, no brain, called by the natives that dread it a "mapapire-z-ananna." You may see that snake in the "Bronx Zoo."

This country, looking for a cure for its troubles, is impatient if it has to wait even a few months. The cure that we are looking for, a cure for human selfishness, greediness, brutality, dishonesty and stupidity, will take longer in the finding than did that poisonous "bushmaster."

The Associated Press reports an agreement between Italy and France to "curb Hitler" and his Reich. The first plan is to block Germany's proposed re-arming. France and Italy are also supposed to have agreed on a method of handling the Austrian situation. Perhaps marrying the little Austrian Hapsburg pretender to the Italian Princess Maria is part of that arrangement.

The determined, loud-speaking Hitler, apparently not worried, says that his national social leadership is "unswerving and unshakable," and will last one thousand years and "revolution in Germany is at an end."

That is what you might call optimism. No government scheme has ever lasted for a thousand years.

It is true, as Chancellor Hitler says, that "revolutions are merely destined to destroy centers of power. Evolution alone can change conditions."

RING USED AS WEAPON IN ROW

With their diamond engagement ring as the missile, Miss Mary Chester Guild of Beacon street, Back Bay, and Thomas W. McCue, Brookline bond salesman, engaged in a brief but torrid battle today to mark the second breaking of the engagement in four days.

According to McCue, 29-year-old Adonis and former Tech student, his fiery 28-year-old fiancee invaded his room today, hurled the ring at him, had it hurled back at her, hurled it again, had it thrown back and again threw it—this time for keeps.

The brief session occurred, McCue said, after he had announced for the second time—and a second time without first informing her—that the engagement was off.

MOTHER NEAR

While the battle raged in his bedroom, he said, Mary's mother remained downstairs in the Ackers avenue house.

McCue's second announcement of the bridal break was made over the telephone to newspapers.

Called at her Back Bay home, Miss Guild expressed surprise and then indignation. She cried:

"What, another statement? My refusal to run away and marry him last night no doubt resulted in this last statement of Mr. McCue's.

"This is really a private quarrel, but every time we engage in such an argument, Mr. McCue seems to take great delight in expressing his feelings to the newspapers. He just seems to go out of his mind following our quarrels."

McCUE TELLS OF ROW

It was after making this statement that the girl went over to the Ackers avenue home of McCue in Brookline. Later, McCue told the Boston Evening American:

"Miss Guild came here with her mother. I was asleep upstairs in my bedroom. The first thing I knew I heard apounding on the door. I got up and went to the door and asked who was there.

"She said, 'It's Mary. Open the

2 CAPTURED IN HAVERHILL PAY HOLDUP

Haverhill, Sept. 7 — Two armed men held up the paymaster of the P. & G. Shoe Company in Essex street this afternoon but were caught in a stirring chase after one of them had tossed a gun into a nearby river.

The amount of the payroll, all of which was recovered, was not immediately determined.

Police said the paymaster was ordered outside the office of the plant after the gun-waving robbers had frightened several girls employed in the office.

One of the captors was the driver of an express truck that happened to be passing the plant when the gunmen dashed from the building.

3 SOUGHT FOR 2 HOLDUPS

Three armed men were being sought by the police today on the suspicion that they not only robbed Richard J. Casey, 43, of 1638 Commonwealth avenue, Brightno, of $12 and clubbed him into a coma, but also that they entered the office of the Careful Cleaning Co., at 184 Boylston street.

The trio walked into the latter place shortly after it was opened by Louis Weitzmann, of Hazelton street, Mattapan, the manager. They found nothing of value. Leaving, one of the bandits warned:

"The next time we come in, you better have dough in your wallet, or we'll give you the works."

Casey was found unconscious by police of the Milk street station behind a building in Bromfield street. He was taken to Haymarket Relief Hospital, where he told of being forced to the rear of the building by three men. He struggled with them and was clubbed over the head. The men got $12.

Five in Plane Win Air Joust With Death

PILOT SHANNON STEWARDESS DALY

Lost in storms and fog on the way from Newark to Chicago, W. S. Shannon of New York, pilot of a transcontinental American Air Line plane, finally found himself over Lowell early today and landed his ship. For six hours the big plane, carrying the pilot, co-pilot, Miss Marcella Daly of Brooklyn, N. Y., stewardess, and three passengers, roamed the murky skies with its radio dead and the course lost.

FIVE NEAR DEATH IN LOST PLANE

Five lives hung in the balance for a time today when a lost passenger plane en route from Newark, N. J., to Chicago roared aimlessly over Lowell, Nashua and Lawrence while fog prevented a landing.

The big ship, 200 miles off its course, finally landed at the Lowell Airport while police and fire departments were deluged with telephone calls from frightened residents.

LANDED SAFELY

Chance sighting of the airport marker finally led to the safe landing of two men passengers in addition to Winfield S. Shannon of New York, pilot, Herbert Clark of New York, co-pilot, and Miss Marcella Daly of Brooklyn, N. Y., stewardess.

The names of the passengers were temporarily withheld. Pilot Shannon said they slept through the experience.

PILOT TELLS STORY

The plane was bound from Newark to Chicago via Albany. When it failed to "check in" at Albany in a reasonable time a search was started along the eastern seaboard.

Pilot Shannon reported by tele-

Al Smith's League Fights New Deal

By International News Service.

Washington, Sept. 7—Blunt notice that the newly organized American Liberty League, Al Smith, John W. Davis, et al., intends to fight many features of the Roosevelt new deal, was served today in the form of a statement further outlining the purposes and intentions of the league.

Combined with mounting attacks on the New Deal in other quarters, it now seems clear that the so-called radical aspects of the Roosevelt program are in for a thorough going over in the congressional campaign, and in the general election of 1936. Then Mr. Roosevelt as well as a new congress are to be elected.

"ABUSES" LISTED

In its new statement, the first it has issued since President Roosevelt chided it for "loving its property more than its neighbors," the league disclaimed being anti-New Deal or anti-Roosevelt.

And, indirectly, it retorted to Mr. Roosevelt by saying the league movement:

"Will not be stilled by the wisecracks of politicians and partisans or epithets that come from those unfamiliar with its solemnity of purpose."

Notwithstanding the disclaimer of being anti-New Deal, the league listed a number of "abuses" which it intimated have grown up under the New Deal, and which it proposes to correct. The league said:

"We believe that Congress should represent the people and not shirk that task by delegating its authority to bureaucrats under the guise of administrative 'efficiency.'"

This was construed a direct slap at the 73rd Congress, the "Roosevelt Congress," which enacted the recovery program and delegated vast powers to the executive branch of the government. The statement added:

"We believe that Congress should make the laws and that

Speedy Action Seen as Peace Board Meets

By Associated Press

Washington, Sept. 7—President Roosevelt's textile strike inquiry board went quickly into action today with an announcement it would meet representatives of strikers and employers "as rapidly as is practical."

The board made the announcement after a conference with the Labor Relations Board, and just before calling on Secretary Perkins.

At the same time, strike leaders said a decision on adding workers in the rayon, synthetic yarn, dyeing, hosiery and other miscellaneous divisions to the general textile strike would be made at a series of conferences over the week-end.

Peace Board Plans to Meet Leaders

The President's board, in its announcement, said:

"The first duty of this board, under the President's executive order, is to assemble as quickly as possible the principal facts bearing on the causes of the strike.

"We plan, as rapidly as practical, to meet with representatives of the textile workers, representatives of the employers, code authority members, the Cotton Textile National Industrial Relations Board and such other agencies

Riot Squads Rout Pickets, Arrest Ten

Flying squadrons of pickets were repulsed in Lawrence and several other New England centers today, arrests were made and the first sabotage was reported as violence of a tragic nature threatened locally in the spreading textile strike.

Taking cognizance of a situation hourly fraught with greater danger in Massachusetts, Governor Ely warned against bloodshed, called for calm council and hinted at use of the National Guard.

Indication that Massachusetts state police may be sent into the danger zones was seen in the governor's conference with General Daniel Needham, public safety commissioner.

Police Repulse Pickets, Arrest 10

Police riot suads at Lawrence barred a flying squadron of 100 strikers from Fall River at the Andover line, made 10 arrests, read the riot act and ordered the strikers to keep away from the city, where 20,000 are employed in 25 mills, unaffected by the strike.

Auto Looter Gets 4 Months in Jail

William H. Allen, 31, of Norwich street, South End, was given four months today by Judge Adlow in municipal court for theft of 30 electric light bulbs from a parked automobile and two bags from another car.

Allen was arrested after two New York men told police they saw him untying luggage from their car and taking the two bags. A search of his room revealed the bulbs stolen earlier in the evening from the automobile of a Haverhill man.

'I'LL BURN,' SAYS LITTLE EVA,' BUT I AIN'T AFRAID TO DIE

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Cooperstown, N. Y., Sept. 7—"Little Eva" Coo, who murdered and must die, broke the iron shell of her nerve today and became a quiet mad woman seeing death wherever she looked.

"I'll burn," she said. "But I ain't afraid to die."

She looked like something that was frozen. She cried. She shook, she was scared.

Her strange blue eyes had turned from cold to wild in that second when a jury foreman spoke the words "guilty as charged" and "Little Eva" knew she must die for killing old Harry Wright, her crippled handyman, on Crumhorn Mountain.

"But I'll die without tellin' what I know." She grinned—a fanatic's smile widening through a frightened woman's tears.

"There ain't one person in the world who knows how Harry Wright died. And they'll never find out from me!"

Eva sat on a narrow wooden bench in her white iron-barred cell in the little Otsego county jail. She will leave tomorrow for the Sing Sing deathhouse. The International News Service reporter sat on the other end of the bench.

"Those jurors never heard the real story," Eva went on slowly.

Murderess, outcast, scarlet woman—all the epithets that had been hurled at her in the past three weeks were written on her stony face.

"Am I shieldin' somebody? I wouldn' say if I was. It doesn't matter now. I'm taking this rap—and I took it without cryin', didn't I?"

Eva swore today she would carry to her grave the secret of that murder, done at the haunted house on Crumhorn mountain—for $9802.

"I never had a chance," she said bitterly.

She refused to tell her mother's name or where she lived.

When the reporter suggested accompanying her to the ride down to Sing Sing tomorrow, Eva said quickly:

"Are you comin' down to see me burn?"

"No," the reporter replied, "There's a law against women witnessing electrocutions."

Eva grinned.

"But there's no law against burnin' women, huh?"

Her lawyers have announced their intention to appeal the case, but to "Little Eva," who does not understand law, the gesture is so many wasted words.

"Little Eva" understands only one thing—she is going to die.

A few cells further down the tier from that of Mrs. Coo was Mrs. Martha Clift, 27-year-old mother, facing a term of 20 years to life for her part in the policy slaying of Wright. Mrs. Clift pleaded guilty to a second degree murder charge, and was sentenced immediately after Mrs. Coo had been removed from the courtroom.

Mrs. Coo, roadhouse proprietor who dealt in love, must pay for the crime in the electric chair at Sing Sing, fifth woman to be executed there. Execution of her sentence was set for the week of October 15, unless her appeal is

4 'L' WORKERS HURT IN CRASH

Four workers, on a Boston Elevated repair truck, were injured today when an automobile plowed into it at Broadway and Main street, Everett. The car then swerved into an Elevated upright. But the driver sped off after only a quick glance at the damage.

Those hurt were James E. McGuirk, 459 Cambridge street, Allston; Aaron Best, 42 Warren avenue, Milton; John J. Schleich, 27 Eggleston street, Jamaica Plain, and John Saunders, 26 monument street, Charlestown. All suffered minor injuries and were treated by a doctor in the neighborhood.

Police traced the car to the Chelsea Motor Mart, in Park street, Chelsea, where they learned that it had been taken out by an employe. A girl was in the car with him at the time of the crash, according to the police.

2400 N. Y. Cafes Quit Rum Trade

New York, Sept. 7 (US)—Twenty-four hundred restaurants, 40 per cent of the 6000 in New York city, will quit selling liquor, the Society of Restauranteurs, Inc., revealed today. Because of the high taxes and large fees, the 2400 cafes will not file applications for renewal of their liquor licenses, which expire September 31.

Eva 30th U. S. Woman to Be Executed

Slayer Will Atone in Chair Where 2 Women Died

"Little Eva" Coo, above, convicted in the slaying of Harry Wright, her handyman, at Cooperstown, N. Y., has not given up hope. She conferred with her lawyer to begin attempts to escape the death penalty. (Picture from International News Photograph Service).

While the attendant clergyman intones a prayer, guards will snap the straps in place and apply the wet electrodes.

The executioner will throw a switch.

And "Little Eva" Coo, convicted murderess, will die at Sing Sing prison, New York, in the same grim chair in which Mrs. Ruth Snyder and Mrs. Anna Antonio paid the penalty for similar crimes.

30th WOMAN EXECUTED

Mrs. Coo will be the 30th woman to be hanged or electrocuted in the United States. All but one of the previous 29 were convicted of taking human life—and gave their own lives in the settlement of their debt to society.

The only woman put to death under United States law for a crime other than murder was Mary Hall, hanged in Pennsylvania in 1781 for burglary.

While the American colonies were still under British rule, women had been hanged for witchcraft, as historic Salem remembers.

But Mary Hall was the first feminine offender to be executed after the Revolution.

ONE PROVEN INNOCENT

Of the 29, in ten states, put to death for murder, one was subsequently proven innocent.

She was Margaret Houghtaling, hanged in Hudson, N. Y., in 1817, after having been convicted of strangling her baby.

Years later, a woman neighbor, on her deathbed, confessed to the crime and gave convincing evidence of having committed it.

Mrs. Houghtaling was the first woman executed in New York. Mrs. Coo, when—and if—she goes to the chair will be the 10th.

FIFTH IN CHAIR

Of all executions of women, that of Ruth Snyder at Sing Sing, Jan. 12, 1928, attracted widest attention. A spectacular battle was waged to save her.

Public feeling, however, had been aroused by the brutal nature of her crime, the slaying of her husband by beating him with a window weight.

The more recent execution of Mrs. Anna Antonio, mother of three children, was followed by electrocution of two male accomplices.

ACCUSED MAN HOURS IN COMA

Fincastle, Va., Sept. 7—Hours after a spectacular collapse in the crowded courtroom here, where he is on trial for his life, charged with kidnaping Mrs. Mary Jane Hastings, Major Robert C. Kent, Jr., remained unconscious in the county jail.

While three state alienists insisted he was faking, his own doctor, W. N. Breckenridge, asserted Kent was in a state of nervous collapse.

300,000 NAZIS MOBILIZED TO CHEER HITLER

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER
(Copyright, 1934, by International News Service).

Nuremberg, Sept. 7 (INS)—Another 175 special trains arrived in Nuremberg today, pouring another 150,000 Nazi party officials into the city to participate with 150,000 already here tonight in a torchlight procession ten miles long and to carry 21,000 flags with cheering salute past Reichsleader Adolf Hitler.

the truly colossal dimensions of the truly colossal dimensions of the party's congress, which is intended to prove again that enthusiasm for the Nazi idea has not waned.

Fuel for the enthusiasm is being poured out in many hours of speeches by party leaders.

Today Walther Darre, minister of agriculture, assured the congress that Germany's new crops would suffice for the food needs of the population without calling on foreign countries.

Darre reiterated that it is the Nazi intention to make Germany economically independent.

FOOD IMPORTS SHRINK

Darre cited figures showing that food imports under the Nazis have shrunk to a fraction of their pre-war value.

He used this as proof of the success of Nazi economic policies, thus, however, making a virtue of a necessity since the fact that Germany's exports have sunk to such a low figure that all imports including food had to dwindle whether it was desirable or not.

Whatever the popular enthusasm for Nazi economic policies may be, popular enthusiasm for Hitler remains at the boiling point. His appearance is greeted with devoted ovations.

Today his handsome vice-chief of the party, Rudolph Hess, received embarrassing proof that he shares the popularity of his chief to an uncomfortable degree.

SCHMELLING "MOBBED"

As he returned from the congress to his hotel, a large crowd of young women broke a cordon of storm troops guarding his automobile and rushed toward Hess, attempting to touch and embrace him.

Hess, blushing and unwilling to be rude and unable to defend himself, was rescued when the storm troops forcibly drove the women back to the sidewalks.

FATHER OF FOUR SHOOTS WIFE, ENDS OWN LIFE

The woman, who is on the verge of death in Truesdale Hospital, Fall River, was shot in a field near the house.

Her husband approached her and an argument ensued.

It lasted only a few minutes when he raised the gun and fired.

He then went into the house, removed a shoe and stretched out on the floor. He pointed the barrel of the gun toward his heart and pulled the trigger with his toe. Death was instantaneous.

Neighbors said the couple had been quarreling for some time. They have four children, ranging from five to 17 years of age.

2100 LABORERS FOR CITY GET MORE PAY

The 2100 city laborers whose wages were cut $4.50 weekly by Mayor Mansfield last February will have that reduction restored to them next Friday, the mayor announced today. They will, however, be compelled to work five and one half days a week, the mayor ruled.

The laborers originally worked five and one half days a week but when former Mayor Curley was compelled to reduce their wages by 10 per cent in 1932 he placed them on a five day week.

When Mayor Mansfield took office he ruled that they should not be paid for six working days while actually employed only five days and he imposed the $4.50 reduction, thereby cutting their earnings from $27 to $22.50.

Mayor Mansfield stated that on October 1 he will carry out his previously announced plan to restore 600 persons now on payless furloughs to the city payroll.

The increase for laborers means expenditure of an additional $68,000 for the remainder of the year. Abolition of the furlough system will result in additional expenditure of $70,000.

Two departments now affected by the payless furlough system will not benefit by Mayor Mansfield's change of plans. The 33 building inspectors and four employes of the street-laying-out department will remain under suspension.

June's Baby Puts Stars in Eclipse

JUNE COLLYER STUART ERWIN

June Collyer, really Mrs. Stuart Erwin, and Erwin are supposed to be headliners at Loew's Orpheum this week. They merit the honor—but. They have a two-year-old baby, "Baby Stuart." And the baby has a habit of earning all the applause, even though he might be sleeping in a hotel when the act goes on. (Picture by Boston Evening American Staff Photographer.)

NAVAL OFFICER HELPED FIGHT AGAINST PERU

Washington, Sept. 7 (AP)—A Senate committee was told today that an officer of the United States navy supplied Colombian officials detailed plans for defense of that country's ports against the Peruvian navy.

The recommendations, described as prepared by Lieutenant-Commander James H. Strong, dealt with plans for defense of the Colombian ports of Buenaventura and Tumaco.

They were given to the Colombian consul-general in New York in November, 1932, when relations between Colombia and Peru were strained because of a dispute over the Leticia region.

The recommendations went into the record over the objections of L. L. Driggs, president of the Driggs Ordnance Company.

REBUFFED BY SENATOR

Interrupting Senator Pope (D., Idaho) in his reading of the letter concerning the Peruvian-Colombia matter, Driggs said:

"Pardon me, senator, but do you think this is a matter for public discussion; isn't it an affront to diplomatic courtesy?"

"I don't think so; this is a senate investigation," replied the senator curtly.

Driggs said he went after foreign business after he found Europe lagging in keeping its equipment modernized.

The munitions manufacturer said his anti-aircraft gun was a defensive weapon, used only to repulse aircraft attacks.

Senator Clark (D-Mo) disputed the contention, saying the weapon could be used for offensive purposes.

A letter to Driggs from a high officer of the United States Army ordnance department told him the department "desired to encourage in every way possible" the ordnance work the Driggs company was undertaking for other countries.

AID FROM GOVERNMENT

Driggs testified his company had difficulty in obtaining compensation for use of its designs by the War Department, and had been told the Government would help him develop the production capacity of his plant "which would mean more to you than compensation.'." He said:

"That is the basis on which we operated since 1927."

In 1928, Driggs wrote his agent in Stamboul, Turkey, that the United States government had given "good co-operation" in obtaining foreign orders to keep American munitions plants busy.

"It is for the purpose, however, of bringing these orders to this country, and furnishing work for our plants, and to be used as such, but not to be broadcast and merely serve the purpose of furnishing information to competitors.

"We have already been allowed to go quite far with regard to the data of the guns."

Driggs said it was the policy of the department to make known secrets about guns for foreign orders as long as national defense was made secure by increased facilities for making them in this country.

CO-EDS FIANCE TELLS OF DEATH

By International News Service

Norman, Okla., Sept. 7—Neal Myers broke down and sobbed on the witness stand today while telling the tragic story of his love affair with Marian Mills, 19-year-old University of Oklahoma beauty queen, and of the girl's subsequent death resulting from an attempt to thwart motherhood.

Between fits of emotion, Myers insisted that he wanted to wed Marian. He said he purchased the medicine which has been held responsible for Marian's death at the request of Mrs. Hazel Brown, in whose home the girl died.

When Myers related how he had tried artificial respiration to revive Marina after she had apparently died, he broke into tears and had difficulty resuming his story.

Myers said Mrs. Brown told him Marian was "as good as dead" and that he should take her away in a car. This he refused to do, Myers testified, and said he was then told to leave the country and answer no questions.

Secrets of Zaharoff's Life Story Bared

Who is this Sir Basil Zaharoff, mystery man of world armaments, the international czar of canons and shrapnel and submarines, whose wraith dominates the munitions hearings in Washington? What is his background? Where did he get his start? Why does he seclude himself, grim, silent but still powerful, on the French Riviera? In a series of five articles of which this is the first, Universal Service tells the story of Zaharoff, his life, his ideals, his power.

By ERNEST HOPKINS

Copyright, 1934 by Universal Service, Inc.

The protean hand of Europe's "Man of Mystery," in fact the most mysterious personage alive, is revealed today by the Nye committee in Washington, as having reached quietly and secretly across the Atlantic and locked fingers with a supposedly all-American armaments firm.

The Electric Boat Company, holder of basic patents on the submarines so essential to war, is disclosed as having been for years past involved in secret agreements with Vickers, Ltd., the British munitions concern, and as having hired as its own agent for foreign sales the ubiquitous Sir Basil Zaharoff, master-merchant of death.

TANKS HIS MONUMENTS

Zaharoff, super-salesman of lethal weapons—Zaharoff, maker of cabinets, manufacturer of war-scares, hidden friend of kings, premiers and world bankers—Zaharoff, of whom it has been written:

"The tombstones of a million men shall be his monument."

For fifty years past there has not been a war that has not enriched Zaharoff, and usually he has sold weapons to both sides. Now, should we happen by any chance to go to war with Spain, American commerce would be barried by the $766,000 worth of submarines of American build, which Zaharoff supplied to the Spanish navy between 1919 and 1930. And further such revelations are promised.

History repeats itself. When the English went to war against the Boers in South Africa 30 years ago, British soldiers were killed by Vickers machine guns which Zaharoff, Vickers' head sales genius, had sold to Oom Paul Kruger. But later the British government knighted him with the Grand Order of the Bath—for unnamed and still mysterious "services to the empire." Yet he's a French citizen.

BOTH SIDES PAID HIM

Zaharoff's interest in the Krupp concern, plus his huge holdings in Vickers, Ltd., saw to it that both sides in the World War poured money into his coffers. He became reputedly the richest man in Europe.

Europe has been in a fever over Zaharoff ever since a French politician, just after the war, cried out against the "Systeme Zaharoff" — the mingling of intrigue, bribery, statecraft and war scares by which the market for munitions was kept brisk. Now there's an American angle.

So—who is this Zaharoff? What is the personality, of his shadowy 85 year old "richest man", who seldom is seen in public, never talks for publication, denies nothing affirms nothing, whose very name is spoken in a whisper all over Europe, and who for a half century has fattened upon wholesale death?

So secretively does he move, that he is ever said in his active days to have had two doubles, who showed themselves in Londan or Paris when he was in Athens or Vienna. He is apparently at Pontoise, France, at the moment, for when reporters called to ask about the newly revealed American connection an urbane secretary emerged and said:

REFUSES TO TALK

"Sir Basil has never given an interview or a statement in his life, and he's not going to begin doing it at the age of 85."

Even his place of birth is legendary. The prevailing theory is that he is a Greek, born in Asia Minor. But it has been stated that he is a native of Mouchliou, near Constantinople; the son of a Russian officer and a Turkish woman; a native of the Whitechaple slums; the son of an Albanian tribal chief; the child of parents persecuted in Odessa.

Scotland Yard is said to have a photostat of one birth certificate, from Odessa; the French Surete another, from Mughla in Asia Minor. Either may be a forgery, for Sir Basil could always arrange things for his major purpose—concealment.

At all events, authorities agree that he was in Constantinople in the 1860's, a young man already master of 14 languages, picking up a living as a fireman, as a guide, as a vendor of steamship tickets, and very poor.

On another point, too, all legends agree—in his early days he was in trouble with the law. How Basil Zaharoff—a shadow with a police record—came to be the man who moved governments is one of the most extraordinary of tales of our age.

(The second article will be published tomorrow.)

ROBINSON HOME AFTER WIFE'S DEATH RACE

"Er—this is William Albert Robinson, at Castle Hill, Ipswich. I'd let you know I'm back. Yes, and feeling fine."

"Oh, from the Galapagos Islands."

TRIP DESCRIBED

And as simply as that came the news today of the safe arrival here, after months of travel, of author-adventurer Robinson of Cambridge and the seven seas. Robinson said:

"We had a great trip. On a cargo boat from Panama. We were the only passengers. Docked at Baltimore and came here by train.

"We're staying temporarily with my mother-in-law, Mrs. R. T. Crane, at her summer home on Castle Hill, Ipswich.

"I'm still a little weak from my operation. I had two, in fact, the second at Balboa in the Canal zone."

It was on a tiny island in the South Pacific, in May of this year, that Robinson was central figure in a life and death drama which thrilled the world.

STRICKEN IN WILDS

Stricken with acute appendicitis, he lay helpless, while his young wife, society darling and daughter of a Chicago millionaire, sailed a small boat to an off-shore fishing vessel and dot-dashed across 3000 miles of ocean a plea for medical assistance and immediate first-aid instructions.

United State Navy surgeons flashed back directions for keeping the patient alive until help could come.

That help did come as fast as the navy could send it by fast cruiser and by airplane.

GOING BACK

Robinson said:

"I'll work for a while on my new book, a historic novel with a Galapagos seting. Then I might do a little lecturing. Then we'll go back—yes,—back to Galapagos. There's a lot down there I still want to do.

"No, the isolation will not worry us. There's no danger really. I can't have apendicitis again."

ERWIN, COLLYER STAR, IS BABY

The movie "ads" tell you that Stuart Erwin and June Collyer, who have been happy though married in Hollywood for lo, these four years, are headlining at Loew's Orpheum this week. But don't you believe a word of it.

The real star of their act and the entire bill, for that matter—and "Stu" and June were the first to mention it—is "Baby Stuart," their two-year-old son.

Though at the time he's probably snoozing luxuriously in his parents' Ritz-Carlton Hotel suite in an elaborate crib, the mere mention of his name in the act causes tumultuous applause.

FATHER PROUD

His father says pridefully:

"After that, we don't mean a thing. We're through, and they're waiting for the baby to take a bow."

Said "Papa" Erwin:

"It's all very exhausting. I'm thinking of taking advantage of the Sunday dance-act ban to get us a little rest.

"I'm going to tell the folks that our's is a little fan-dance number, but since that sort of thing is barred here on Sunday we'll just say 'Howjedo' and 'Good-bye' and take the day off."

At this juncture, the lovely June, after adjusting her husband's tie a little straighter, broke in to say:

"Really, too much has been happening these two weeks since we've been East. Stuart and I are so unused to it, and the baby —he calls himself 'Baby Stuart' —doesn't seem to know what to make of it after his placid existence in our Beverly (California) backyard sandpile.

IN PICTURE SOON

"We really never go anywhere in Hollywood, just to an occasional movie. And we never stay up later than 10 or 11."

You'll be seeing the altogether charming Mrs. Erwin soon in "Stratosphere," in which she co-stars with Bill Cagney, brother of the well-known Jimmie.

Her husband, who has just completed "Have a Heart" for M-G-M, is the author of the very diverting satire on Hollywood's long-distance movie marriages, in which they are making their first personal appearance together.

Soup Eaters Get Plenty of Drip but No Race Tip

Soup being something the brash Colonel Egan knows very little about, a very valuable tip avoided him today in the way of the Rockingham hosses, to fall into the soup and the laps of three earnest racing form students in Lynn.

The earnest trio were in a Central avenue restaurant in the Shoe City, inhaling each of his bowl of soup and figuring out the chances at Rockingham when they sudenly noticed that although they had been dipping conscientiously into the bowls between calculations, the bowls did not seem to reduce in contents.

This was very puzzling indeed until they discovered that the roof was leaking and dripping into the bowls. A hasty search of the entries at Rockingham disclosed that the horse nearest named to rain was Cold Spill in the fifth. Colonel Egan could hardly match that.

MISSING CHILD DROWNED IN GRAVEL PIT

An all-night search for six-year-old Helen Toland of Gardner street, West Roxbury, ended today when the child's body was found hanging in the water of a gravel pit at the end of her street.

Her dress was caught in the limb of a tree that stretches out over the pool. It is believed that the child fell from a spring-board that parallels the limb and that her dress became entangled in the latter, leaving her dangling helpless below the water's surface.

The search for the little girl was started by her mother, Mrs. Mary Tyler when the child failed to come in from her playing about 9:30 last night. The body was found by Kenneth Brown of Pond street, Westwood, in charge of the gravel yard.

Drowns in "Lake"

Helen Toland, 5, Gardner street West Roxbury, drowned last night in an artificial lake near her home. Her body was found in the rain-filled sand pit this morning.

3 HURT AS AUTO HITS TIPCART

According to police, the automobile, operated by Catherine O. Taylor, 65, of Bay View street, Hyannis, and with John Connell of Elm street, Wollaston, as a passenger, skidded at the intersection and collided with the tip cart.

The shafts broke and one jagged end pierced the car and tore through the roof. The horse sat down, but then got up and ran for the barn, a short distance away.

Thomas White, 60, of School street Quincy, was thrown [illegible] the ground, suffering cuts a[illegible] the face, while the automobile [illegible] also sustained slight cuts. All were treated by a nearby doctor.

Man Is Fined for Kidnaping Father

On the charge of kidnaping his own father, Charles Aucoin, 44, of Heath street, Roxbury, was fined $200 today in superior court in Worcester and paid the fine.

The son was convicted on the charge yesterday by a jury which deliberated three hours. He was accused of taking his father, Peter Aucoin, 78, by force from the home of a married daughter, Mrs. Alfred Bourassa of Marcy street, Southbridge, last March, after a dispute over the father's Civil War pension.

bility and clergy to the pocketbooks of the merchants.

Nothing is final but evolution. According to scientists, it changed the tiny shrew to the gigantic whale, changed a small five-toed creature into the horse with one hoof for each leg. It will do a great many things to Chancellor Hitler's form of government in considerably less than one thousand years, very probably in a good deal less than ten years.

"Racing is a great success in New England. The pari-mutuels betting has taken in twenty millions this year already."

And:

"Of course, you know that five percent of that goes to the government, so, thanks to the restoration of racing, the government gets one million dollars."

Of course it does, and horse race owners, touts, gamblers and other riffraff of the race-track get NINETEEN million dollars.

What would you think of a father if he allowed criminals to take his children's money if they gave him, the father, five cents out of every dollar taken? What do you think of a state that permits racetrack gambling on a "steal all you can, but give me five per cent" basis?

Again the United States is having trouble with Russia about debts. Why is the United States so much worried about a trivial debt owed by Russia, thanks to the foolishness of private financiers, and apparently so little disturbed about a gigantic debt of ten thousand millions which our dear "allies," or "gallant allies," as they used to call themselves, ignore so completely?

DRIVER IN 4-CAR CRASH JAILED

Alphonso H. Pittman, of Linden street, Everett, in Dedham court today was sentenced to six months in the House of Correction on charges of operating an automobile so as to endanger and leaving the scene of an accident.

He admitted the first charge and pleaded not guilty on the second, but was sentenced to three months on each one by Judge Clifford B. Sanborn.

Pittman was one of those who figured in the four-car crash on the Providence super-highway on August 29. Six persons were injured in the crash, and five are still in Norwood Hospital. They were hurt, however, before Pittman's car plowed into the wreckage.

REALTY OWNERS HURL DEFI AT MANSFIELD

Branded as radicals, they charged, by the action of the mayor's office in assigning their tax protest meeting to the Mall, instead of the bandstand on Boston Common, officers of the Massachusetts Real Estate Owners' Association, today asked the city council to obtain redress for the "insult."

The meeting, planned for the afternoon of Sunday, September 16, was intended as a protest against Boston's high tax rate.

PLAN MEETING ANYWAY

Mrs. Hannah Connors, secretary of the association and Milton resident, intimated that the group might use the bandstand even if the permit were not forthcoming. She declared:

"We'll hold the mass meeting whether we have a permit or not. We'll try our best to obtain legal right to use the bandstand, but if we are denied that right, we'll use it any way, regardless of Mayor Mansfield."

Councilman Robert Gardiner Wilson, Jr., of Dorchester, today planned to introduce in the city council an order demanding that the mayor grant the bandstand permit. He said:

McNARY URGED TO ACT

"By transferring the meeting to the Mall, the mayor placed these Boston taxpayers in the same class with reds and radicals."

The association, which claims to have a membership of 12,000 Boston taxpayers, appealed to Herbert L. McNary, chief of the licensing division, for correction of the alleged error. He promised to take the matter up with Mayor Mansfield.

PAYS IN CHAIR FOR MURDER

By Associated Press

Ossining, N. Y., Sept. 7—Alphonse Brengard, former state trooper, has paid with his life for the slaying of a policeman on a lonely Long Island road nearly six years ago.

He was electrocuted in Sing Sing prison last night for the murder of Patrolman John Kennedy, Nassau County policeman.

The Rev. John McCaffrey, Catholic chaplain, led him into the death chamber at 10.03 p. m., Eastern Standard Time. Six minutes later he was dead.

"Goodbye, Mom," he said, as he sat in the chair.

TROOPS READY IN DOLE WAR

By Associated Press

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 7—Two national guard companies began special drill today as an aftermath of a battle between police and picketers in front of federal emergency relief headquarters here.

Twenty persons were injured in the fighting of 200 agitators against police who jailed 27, including a woman and a boy.

Governor B. B. Moeur ordered the guardsmen ready for emergency and announced he would take hold "with an iron hand" if troops were called out.

Authorities said picketers were attempting to agitate a strike among men on relief payrolls for greater disbursements. Approximately 10,000 families are on relief rolls in the county.

'Reds' Urge Workers to Force Strike

This is the eighth in a series of articles exposing the underground campaign which the Communist Party is pressing for advance of its soviet ideals in New England.

These articles are based upon authentic, secret orders of the Communist leaders which have come into possession of this paper and are published both as a matter of news interest and as a public duty.

(Copyright, 1934, for the Boston Evening American)

When, last April, the Communist party outlined its secret plans for control of New England industry, orders were issued for full co-operation with the National Textile Workers Union.

The NTWU is the "left wing" organization which opposes the United Textile Workers of America and the American Federation of Labor.

With the textile strike even then a likelihood in the expectations of the Communists (as disclosed in previous articles) orders were issued for the mobilization of Communist strength in the independent unions so that if, and when, conservatively organized labor issued a strike call, Communism would be prepared to step in and attempt control.

A graphic illustration of the manner in which this Communist control effort is now being made is contained in an appeal just issued by the National Textile Workers Union, which has no affiliation with the strike authorization.

Communists Step Into the Picture

Under the heading, "Now Is the Time To Strike," the Communist-supported NTWU steps into the picture with the following appeal to the Textile Workers Association of Lowell, the Independent Sheeting Workers of Salem, the American Independent Textile Union of Pawtucket and the Independent Textile Union of Woonsocket (all organizations in which Communists have been seeking a wedge):

"The National Textile Workers Union appeals to all textile workers, and especially to all members of the independent unions, to join the general textile strike for a 30-hour week and a six-hour day, against the vicious stretch-out system and for adequate wage increases.

"The general strike is the only effective way to wipe out the killing stretch-out that is being extended in every textile mill at the present time.

"This general textile strike is the only effective answer to the NRA National Labor Board that has forestalled or crushed one militant action of the textile workers after another, thus helping to maintain starvation wages and miserable working conditions in every textile mill.

"Textile workers can win this textile strike now if every mill is shut down tight and the textile general strike is a grave mistake which will definitely play

"A solid, united front of all textile workers, whether in the U. T. W. the National Textile Workers' Union, or in an independent union, is necessary to win the demands of the strike.

"The suggestion of some of the independent union leaders that you remain at work during this into the hands of the textile employers.

"We urge you to strike now with all the rest of the textile workers. Help to spread this strike to every mill in the United States.

"Elect rank and file strike committees in every mill; these committees to include workers of all unions and unorganized. Place all negotiations in the hands of such rank and file committees. Do not allow the demands to be submitted to arbitration. Do not go back to work until the demands are granted.

Million Workers Urged to Strike Together

"Remember we cannot win better working conditions unless we stick together in every mill, in every city.

"Stand united. Strike now. One million textile workers on strike at the same time can very quick-workers stand up united regardless of what union you belong to.

"Forward for a 100 per cent victory in the strike!"

So Communism "horns in" on strike actions of conservative labor, seeks for a foothold on the foundation it has secretly obtained.

New Bedford was the first big mill city in the nation to be completely shut down in this strike. Ann Burlak has been active there. And in April the Communist issued a secret order directing:

"A plan to be worked out for New Bedford and the assistance of the national organization of the National Textile Workers Union."

(Further disclosures in this series will be made tomorrow.)

TROOPS OCCUPY NEW ORLEANS

By Associated Press

New Orleans, Sept. 7—The full strength of the Louisiana National Guard concentrated on the New Orleans city limits today for the assumption by Senator Huey P. Long of dictatorial powers.

National Guardsmen, estimated to number 2000, converged on the city before noon—the hour at which the "Kingfish" takes over the powers conferred upon him by the acts of the recent special session of the State Legislature.

To a threat of martial law, Mayor T. Semmes Walmsley, enemy of Senator Long, answered:

"We have no intention of surrendering the city to the militia without an effort."

On his side he holds an army of 1500 regular and special police.

The military maneuvers were executed five days before the September 11 primary election in which Long and Walmsley are contending for political control in the city.

They came, also, just after Lieutenant-Colonel Guy Molony, soldier of fortune and campaigner in central American revolutions, arrived to testify before the Legislative investigating committee that he did not come to lead an army against Long—but that he would take great pleasure in doing so.

Lord Raglan Insists Negro and White Will Merge

By Associated Press

Aberdeen, Scotland, Sept. 7—Lord Raglan, chairman of the Anthropological society, who yesterday aired his belief that there would "not be a single person in America without a certain portion of negro blood," today told the British Association for the Advancement of Science that popular beliefs are always wrong.

He told the convention that it was "quite untrue" humans were attracted by opposites and said:

"We are really attracted by and marry people like ourselves."

Regarding his statement of yesterday, Lord Raglan said:

"What is happening in America now is what always happens when two races occupy the same country. It has happened all over the world. They always fuse.

"Beyond that, I cannot go without becoming personal and I do not want to do that."

It was recalled that Lord Raglan caused a stir in last year's convention by debunking the claims of some of England's best families to Norman Blood.

Contract Let on Fellsway Work

The Metropolitan District Commission today announced that the contract for completion of the Revere Beach Extension from Fellsway to Mystic avenue had been awarded to the M. McDonough Co. of Swampscott. The work to be done includes the top surfacing on the roadway and the successful contractor bid $87,000. The work is to be completed by Dec. 1. A bridge over the river is now nearing completion.

The roadway when opened with two lanes for commercial vehicles and four lanes for pleasure cars will be the first of its kind in this section of the country.

Disabled Trawler Is Towed to Port

In tow of the Coast Guard cutter Harriet Lane, the disabled trawler Milton reached the fish pier today with Captain James Foley and a crew of 10 men safely aboard.

The Milton was picked up off Cape Cod after she had flown a distress signal because of a disabled engine. She had previously been towed into Provincetown by the picket boat from Wood End which sighted the signal.

Named to Head Hospital

Worcester, Sept. 7—Dr. Robert H. Baker, assistant superintendent of the Sassaquin Sanatorium in New Bedford, has been appointed medical director of Belmont Hospital.

SAUGUS COUPLE BARE WEDDING

After nearly a year of keeping their elopement secret the former Miss Bernice Gaylor, 23, of Mountain avenue, Saugus, prominent in the younger social set, and Robert W. Ensley, 25, of Caldwell, Ohio, announced today that they had been married last Oct. 1 in New York.

The ceremony was solemnized, they said, at the Madison Avenue Methodist Church, and was the culmination of a romance begun when both were students at Ohio-Wesleyan University at Delaware, Ohio.

The bride of nearly a year was graduated only last June, while Ensley, son of an Ohio clergyman, was graduated in 1932. For the present, the couple will live in Saugus.

Wiley Post Flight Off for Ten Days

Chicago, Sept. 7 (INS)—Repairs to be made on the super-charger of his plane, the "Winnie Mae" will delay the altitude flight of Wiley Post for 10 days, it was announced today. Post, holder of the record for round-the-world flight, went to East Orange, N. J., to oversee the adjustments.

This Ear That Air

By N. F. T.

Singers round and about radioland now have a mystery cleared that has been quite baffling. They at last know the origin of that "Man on the Flying Trapeze" tune. Walter O'Keefe, credited with popularizing the breezy bit, is reported most gratified of all the air folk.

It was written in 1867 by two composers named George Leyborne and Alfred Lee. Both would probably push up from the grave if they could hear the modern, mistreatment of the melody they brought into being as a seriously shaped ballad.

"N. F. T."

Discovery of the original copy was made this week by one Kay Macrae, a singer at WNBX down New York way. Yellow with age, the tattered score was contained in the effects of Miss Macrae's late grandmother. One more purpose served is that a few publicity seeking chiselers along Broadway, claiming to be descendants of the writers, are sporting splotches of crimson for facial coloring.

Postcarding from London, Charley (Andy) Correll, of the "big propolishum" complex, sends word he is sailing for the States today. He and "Amos" get going again one week from Monday.

FLEETING FLASHES

Dr. Walter Damrosch, the musical mentor behind Radio City sound sanctum walls, is 72 years old . . . That catchy "Pardon My Southern Accent" ditty was written by Paul Whiteman's scat singer, Johnny Mercer . . . Phil Harris and his tune troupe do considerable clowning after their rehearsals and programs. They exchange instruments. Imagine a violinist seizing a sax and a drummer doing trombone duty . . . The Yankee Network and the WBZ works operate short wave transmitters that sound alike when announced—the former is W1XAV and the latter W1XAZ—in case anybody cares . . . One studio wag hereabouts suggests that "For All We Know" might make an appropriate graduating class song at a certain famous college he doesn't like, but adds that a question mark should be tacked on the title end . . . Blood and thunder thrillers for kiddies have just about vanished from the ether lanes. Thanks to parental vigilance and much expressed Dad and Mother indignation across the country.

Good news note for earcuppers. Benny McLaughlin brings his "Dunn Blue and McLaughlin" harmony trio up for an airing (WEEI) in the 7 o'clock spotlight tomorrow evening.

Rudy Vallee, shrewd showman that he is, plans to feature a Worcester lass when he plays his one-night stand for dancers at Shrewsbury, on the 19th coming. Marguerita Padula is the portly Miss Verily, she tips the Toledos at around 200 and something. Kate Smith take heed!

CLASSIC 'RIGOLETTO' OPERA AFFORDS RADIO THEME

The musical accompaniment of one of Verdi's most celebrated tragic operas will form the basis for tonight broadcast by the ERA Classial Orchesta (WAAB) at 8 o'clock. Almot every lover of classical gems will agree that, musically, "Rigoletto" is Verdi's masterpiece. It is from the first and second acts of this tragedy tonight's theme will be aired. Helene Norwood, soprano; Vinie Daly, mezzo soprano; Aristide Mizzi, tenor, and Giuseppe Gozzi, baritone, comprise the solo talent who will perform with the assistance of the orchestra, directed by Raffaele Martino.

Evelyn MacGregor

Hazel-eyed Evelyn MacGregor, erstwhile operatic contralto, will feature "Moonglow" among her offerings on the "In the Modern Manner" program tonight (WNAC) from 9:00 to 9:30 o'clock. She will also sing one of Johnny Green's early hits, "Hello, My Lover, Goodbye," with the tuneful aid of Johnny and his rhythmic maestros. A double piano concerto played by Jacques Fray and Mario Braggiotto will be another feature of the popular broadcast.

Frank Crumit, balladeer, will again "master-of-ceremonies" the weekly "Spotlight Revue" to be aired tonight (WNAC) at 10:00 o'clock featuring the comical antics of radio's beloved "nuts"—Colonel Lemuel Q. Stoopnagle and Budd. Everett Marshall, Carol Deis and Victor Young and his orchestra will furnish the musical settings.

Tango, rumba and boliero rhythms, as well as hot American jazz, will be included in the numbers to be played and sung by Tito Guizar, colorful Mexican tenor, in his recital tonight (WNAC) at 7:15.

Isidor Philipp, dean of the French concert pianists and for many years head of the piano department of the Paris Conservatory of Music, will tonight (WBZ) at 10:30 o'clock play the first of a series of sonatas by his former teacher, Charles Camille Saint-Saens, one of France's greatest composers. Philipp will be assisted by Oswaldo Mazzucchi, cellist, in tonight's performance.

June Collyer and Stuart Erwin the screen celebrities opening a "personal" at the Orpheum today, will be interviewed by that ace announcer, Linus Travers, today at 1:15 (WNAC) in a special broadcast originating at the Cocoanut Grove.

Roger Wolf Kahn is assembling a new band which will be the first American orchestra employing three pianos—one for orchestral, or "oom pah" accompaniment, and the other two for solos and specialties . . . an idiosyncrasy of the Three X Sisters is that on the Sunday picnics, which they invariable hold each and every Lord's Day, in addition to lunch hamper, they always carry a portable organ on which they rehearse under the trees, or beside the brook wherever they happen to find themselves . . . an all-time record is being set by Richard Leibert, NBC and Radio City organist, who is on the ether 24 times each week . . . Ralph Kirberry, NBC's Dream Singer, not content with his honors of the air and in marksmanship, has taken to the air in reality—that is he is fast learning to become a pilot . . .

You Hear Her on the Radio

Jeanie Lang . . . Radios Little Miss Muffet . . . Who made her professional debut in a dead faint . . . But who . . . Long since . . . Has come out of it . . . Unlike some other entertainers that could be mentioned . . . But none who have been mentioned here.

The faint of this diminutive songstress . . . She stands only five feet . . . And weighs only 100 pounds . . . Came when she joined up with Brooke Johns . . . As the feminine foil . . . And as her first entrance approached . . . Excitement overcame her . . . And she folded . . . To be carried on-stage by Johns . . . And come to with Johns singing a duet . . . All by himself . . . And the audience thought it was all part of the act.

JEANIE LANG

Diminutive Jeanie was born in St. Looie . . . less than 23 years ago . . . With December 17, 1911, as the date . . . And while thousands cheered . . . Because Jeanie is the type of gal one cheers about . . . Let alone a thousand.

High school dramatics gave her the stage idea . . . Although not the one about fainting . . . And when these were over . . . Jeanie went to work on her parents . . . And overcame their objections to the footlights.

Her movie debut was a bit cooler . . . Compared with that of the stage . . . for when Paul Whiteman . . . Casting for his "King of Jazz" . . . Saw the diminutive starlet . . . And asked her: "Can you sing?" . . . She replied, "I can squeak" . . . And was hired on the spot.

Then radio found her . . . And now Jeanie's personality is regularly on the air . . . Although fans are still losing out . . . Because they cannot see her hazel eyes . . . And her impish smile . . . And her dark, wavy hair . . . And her snappy sweaters and skirts . . . For Jeanie is collegiate . . . And receives many bids to college dances . . . And football games.

Tomorrow's Radio Personality Portrait will be that of Benny McLaughlin—the reason the piano was invented.

"She was very excited about the story I had given to the newspapers. My mother later told me that her mother was downstairs all the time and said that I would be sued for breach of promise.

CLAWING CHARGED

"Yesterday I was at the Charlesgate Hotel. She asked me to sign some sort of a statement, saying that I was angry and jealous. I refused to. She came at me with her nails and scratched my face. She said, 'What do you want me to do, marry you out of desperation?'

"The first day I announced the engagement off, she wanted me to appear with her in public to counteract the effects.

"I had a marriage license and she had a marriage license, and everything had been arranged for the wedding ceremony at St. Lawrence's church in Brookline."

McCue said here that he first met and was introduced to Miss Guild seven years ago while he was a student at M. I. T. He did not see her again, he said, until about a year ago when he met her near the Charles River, and then the romance began. He added:

"Her mother promised us a trip to Europe for the wedding and a convertible coupe for me.

SACRIFICES REFUSED

"I wanted her to make certain sacrifices before our marriage and she refused to do so.

"Her mother threatened to have me arrested for breaking the engagement. She also gave me several engagement presents. But her daughter doesn't know what she wants."

"Do you still love her?" McCue was asked.

"Yes, I still love her," he replied.

Alms-Seeker Has $114.73

It was with some qualms that Patrolman William Usher of Mattapan station arrested Mrs. Ida Rubinovitz, 60 Devon street, Roxbury, for soliciting alms with a tin cup in Blue Hill avenue, Mattapan.

There was an order, however, to pick up such alms-seekers and Patrolman Usher took her to the station.

There, secreted about her clothing, a total of $114.73 was found.

In Dorchester court she was fined $10 on the charge of soliciting alms, and she paid.

While Mrs. Reynolds was assisting the injured man into a car to be taken to the hospital, the car door was slammed on her hand, inflicting a severe laceration.

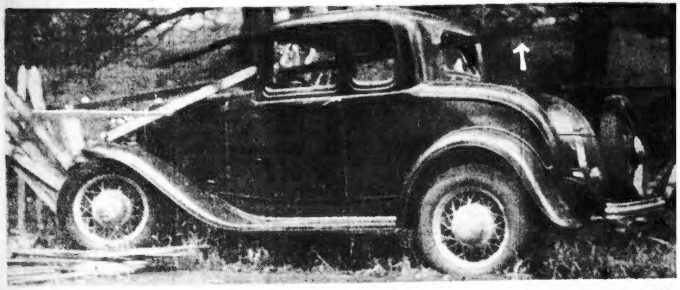
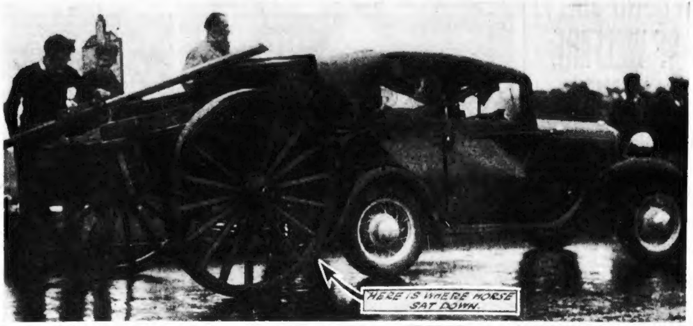
Woman Escapes Death in 'Mercy' Crash



Did you ever hear the story of the hunter caught between a mad bear, a precipice and a roaring waterfall. Well, this true story is even better. Mrs. Elizabeth C. Onatina of Litchfield, Ct., was driving along Salem street, Woburn, today. A car sideswiped her automobile. Momentarily she lost control. Then she found there were but three things for her to do. She might drive into the oncoming car carrying a woman and three children, drive into a telegraph pole or drive into a fence. She chose the fence. Timber flew. A fence rail shot into the windshield through the back window. Lady Luck was in that car, for Mrs. Onatina was only slightly injured. Arrow shows fence rail. (Photo by Suloi Elia.)

Auto Gets Decision in Tangle With Cart on Wet Road



Slippery roads today were the cause of many automboile accidents. At the Furnace Brook parkway, Quincy, an automobile carrying two passengers skidded into a city tip cart. The frightened horse ducked down, the shafts broke, and one pierced the car tearing through the roof. Luckily, the team driver, car riders and horse escaped serious injury. Take a peep. See how the cart and auto tangled up.

7 HURT IN TWO PIKE CRASHES

By Associated Press

Danvers, Sept. 7—Two automobile accidents on the Newburyport Turnpike near here today caused injuries to seven persons.

Frank W. Currier, of South Berwick, Me., his wife Mabel, 56, and his daughter, Winifred, 11, were injured when their sedan was struck by a truck operated by Joseph Berenson, of Portland, Me. Berenson was arrested charged with driving so as to endanger and driving without a Massachusetts license.

The other accident also involved a truck and a sedan. The truck, operated by Omer St. Jean of Lewiston, Me., hit a car driven by Arthur Austin of Amesbury.

Austin's left arm was fractured in four places, while his wife, Elizabeth; Eleanor Noble of Amesbury and Leo Hardy of Framingham, Me., riding with him, were painfully hurt. St. Jean was held, charged with reckless driving.

SMITH, DAVIS HIT NEW DEAL

boards, bureaus and commissions should not be permitted to promulgate arbitrary regulations or laws, or to apply punishments . . . or to conduct trials without adequate opportunity for review and appeal."

STATE RIGHTS ASKED

This was a direct thrust at the NRA and the AAA, both of which "promulgate regulations" and "apply punishments." Another "believe" was:

"We believe that the several states should retain the powers not granted to the federal government by the Constitution, and that the federal government should not, by use of public funds or other form of usurpation, trespass upon the rights of the states."

This apparently was directed at the FERA and the PWA; for their vast ependitures and subsidies to states for public relief and public works. The statement also said:

"We believe that the right to authorize spending of public funds and to raise revenue is solely the funcition of the legislative branch of the government, and that balanced budgets and sound fiscal policy can come only when there is retention by Congress of its full responsibility for the nature and manner of expending public money."

This was a slap at Congress for voting huge sums to be spent for relief and recovery in any manner the executive saw fit.

"The time is coming," the league warned, "when the American people will have to decide to what extent some of the emergency measures taken without warrant of law or the Constitution shall be permanently imbedded in our Constitution."

This constituted rather a general indictment of the general range of new deal legislation.

Nor is the league going to confine itself to purely federal drifts to the left. It said "conspicuous threats" have arisen to constitutional government in a number of States, and the league proposes to deal with them, too. The statement did not mention Upton Sinclair and his "epic" plan for California, but that evidently was the target.

Gen. Butler Guest of Marines' League

Denver, Sept. 7 (INS)—Hundreds of former United States Marines trooped into Denver City Auditorium to hear Major-General Smedley Butler give the principal address of the opening session of the annual convention of the Marine Corps League. Maurice A. Illch, Albany, N. Y., senior vice-commandant, directed affairs because Carlton A. Fisher, Buffalo, N. Y., national commandant, was unable to attend, due to illness.

BRAVES DEATH FOR CHILDREN

Heading her automobile into a fence to avoid a collision on Salem street, Woburn, with a car in which several children were passengers, Elizabeth C. Onativia, 35, of Litchfield, Conn., had a close escape from death today.

A fence rail, hurtling javelin-like through the windshield of the car, missed the Connecticut woman's head by inches. The machine was wrecked.

She told police that after a passing car had sideswiped hers the machine skidded toward another containing children. She pulled into the fence rather than risk a crash. She was unhurt.

MAD MILLIONS

By CHARLES GRANT

CHAPTER XXVII

Alspaugh's stock, along with the rest of the market, continued to fall. A few more days of anguished watching of the ticker and his new margin was wiped out. Again his broker called for more money, or, as an alternative, for authority to prevent furtherl osses, by immediate sale of the declining securities.

The only star in Homer's darkness now was his faith in his chief, and even this was fitfully obscured by clouds of doubt. Had Jasper Ingram taken on too big a load even for a superman to carry? Alspaugh had hot fits and cold fits. At times he asked himself frantically what he was going to do to avert ruin. Then growing bold, he told himself that he might as well be hung for a sheep as for a lamb and did the only thing open to him. He used more of Ingram's money to cover his margins.

Everybody about the office noticed Alspaugh's nervousness. Dark rumors were based on it, for he was deeper in the chief's confidence than anyone, and it was surmised that his condition must be due to some secret crisis in the company's affairs.

On the day Ingram went to Washington, ostensibly for an appeal to the R. F. C., Homer was so nervous he could only make a pretense of attending to his work. Everything depended on the outcome of this application. It was maddening to be kept in suspense about the success of the opening negotiations, and about the final outcome. Yet he knew that he would have been useless to the chief if he had been taken along, for his hands were so unsteady he could not make a legible note.

HUNCHED AT DESK

All day, as he sat hunched at his desk drawing weird figures on the blotter,

He was in a pitiable state when he arrived home that night, and Marian looked at him with cold distaste.

"You've got the worst case of jitters I ever saw," she said. "What on earth's the matter with you? I hope to goodness you're not getting flu or anything."

Homer was not touched by this solicitude. "I'm all right," he snapped. "If I have the jitters, it's because the whole damned country has 'em. When Jasper H. Ingram has to apply to the R. F. C. for money, that's the beginning of the end—you mark my words."

"I'm glad you aren't sick, anyway," Marian said, "because I made a date for us to play contract at the club."

Homer cackled suddenly. "And the way I'm feeing tonight! What do you suppose that'll set us back? Is this a time to throw money away? I couldn't keep who bid what in my head tonight. My own idea's to get tight—costs less, anyhow."

"All right," she said indifferently; "you get tight and we'll pick up another fourth."

"You're a hell of a wife!" He stared at her with bloodshot, accusing eyes. "Don't care what I do, do you? Don't care how I feel — Why can't you act human, when you see me like this?"

"Really, Homer, if you haven't more tact than to bring your business worries home to upset me when you know that since my accident I've been a nerv—"

"You! You! You!" he shouted. "What about me for a change?"

He pulled her to her feet and pointed to her reflection in the mirror over the mantel. "You look like a nervous wreck, don't you?"

It was true that the excitement of Marian's latest love had refreshed her, set her blooming richly, quickened her vitality and her physical appeal. His tormented face beside hers was incongruous, pitiable.

"You look so healthy and so pretty and so damn kissable—I'm not going to stand for your guff about being sick any more!"

Marian saw all her plans endangered in this crisis that had come on so suddenly she hardly knew how to meet it. She found refuge in women's crowning defense—weakness. She uttered a sharp, choked cry and sagged in his arms, taxing Homer's strength to support her.

"Now what—" he cried, more in disguest than alarm. "Marian, you behave!" He didn't believe in her faint, and when his commands and pleadings failed to bring her out of it, he gripped her shoulders and shook her.

Marian forced herself to remain limp, and uncertainty stopped him. Maybe after all . . . ? The doctor had dropped a word or two about shock after her accident. Homer lowered his wife to the chesterfield and looked at her doubtfully. She let one white arm drop to the floor, taking a smart rap on the knuckles and not wincing.

After a minute or two she thought she might open her eyes and did so just in time to save herself from a dash of cold water, for Homer was hastening towards her with a brimming glass. She took it from him and drank, with a smile of gratitude. "You see!" she said pathetically.

"Oh, yes, I see." His response was sour, for he was still not sure that she wasn't fooling him. You're all right as long as I let you alone, is that it?"

"Yes, dear, I think so. I feel much better now. I even think I might go on over to the Club, after I've rested a little. You'll come, won't you, even if you won't play bridge?"

"No, I won't!" he exploded. I'll drive you over, but somebody else will have to bring you home. I'll go right back into town and see a show or something. I've got to get my mind off the market and J. E. and his damned loan."

"Go ahead and have a good time!" she urged generously.

Half hour later, at the club, Marian went to a booth and called a New York number.

"He's coming into town on the 8:02," she said. "Will you see that one of your men follows him?"

Homer walked out of the Pennsylvania station a prey to such a tangled complex of emotions that the shadowing skill of the man who trailed him was quite wasted. He would hardly have noticed it if a platoon of policemen had fallen into step behind him.

He wanted to forget, for just a few hours; and in planning the night before him he was already beginning to forget. He gave the taxi driver the address of the speakeasy to which he had taken Cathleen, and then he had several drinks.

He drew blanks on the first three numbers he called. But the next girl—Dot Whiting—was in It was so long since he had called her that he had to identify himself pretty thoroughly before she remembered him. Then she became agreeable.

"Oh, boy! Am I glad to her your voice?" she cried. "Of course yuo can come over, but how about something to eat first? Where shall I meet you?"

Whenever Laura Ingram closed her eyes she saw the Infanta's rubies glowing in the darkness. The possibility of owning those royal and historic jewels had taken possession of her. She must have them.

Here career as the wife of an immensely wealthy man had given her a surprising number of false ideas about money, about her own claims, about the relative values of things. She was still, at forty-eight, a handsome woman. Presidents of treasury, and prominent financiers whom she often entertained, deferred to her and sedately flirted with her. At her own table, they flattered her by appearing to take her views seriously. As a result, she felt she had a footing in the financial world. She knew, at least, that she had influential friends there.

JEWELS ENTHUSE HER

The carefully-groomed, bald-headed bank president listened with respectful interest to Mrs. Ingram's description of the Infanta's rubies, her passionate asseveration that she simply had to have them, and her admission that Jasper did not want to buy them for her.

"He thinks we might be criticized for spending so much on jewels at this time," she explained, it having been impressed on her by Ingram that, for the sake of his prestige, no money shortage must ever be admitted. "But what I say is, we should look on these jewels as an investment. With all this wild talk of inflation, it may be no better to save dollars than it was to save marks in Germany! Rubies will always be extremely valuable. Perhaps you don't know how very small the supply of them is. They're not like diamonds of which I believe they have tons stowed away on the Rand.

"So I wondered if you couldn't suggest something, Mr. Higgins . . . Some way by which I could secure these jewels without involving my husband. Half a million dollars! It isn't very much, really. I'm sure we spend more than that on the upkeep of the two houses here without counting the Florida place, or all that my husband spends on his yachts and the dozens of people he pensions. I don't consider this disproportionate, for our position!"

Mr. Higgins polished the lenses of his pince-nez, and mused helpfully over her problem. "Why not simply borrow on your personal note, Mrs. Ingram? Your contention that you have a financial standing of your own is perfectly sound, it seems to me."

"Oh, could I do that? Just sign a paper, do you mean?"

"I think I may say that my bank would discount your personal note, but in the sum you are seeking, I am afraid we could not make the loan for more than say, thirty, or at most, sixty days."

"You mean I might have to pay the money back in a month?" she cried in dismay.

"M'm, possibly not, possibly we could renew the note, perhaps somewhat reduced, when it falls due."

"You couldn't lend me the money for, say, a year? Or even six months—"

Mr. Higgins, while assuring her that there would be little difficulty in getting her note renewed, was equally sure that it could not be drawn for a longer period than thirty days.

Mr. Higgins was not averse to the idea of having his bank owed a considerable sum of money by—in effect—Jasper H. Ingram. Laura had not the vaguest understanding of the forces she was meddling with, of the potentialities, good and bad, of half a million dollars.

Elated, triumphant, she sent for the Marques d'Albues and asked hi mto bring the tiara and dog-collar with him. Afterwards she drove to Cartier's, and spent a delightful hour there, enjoying the admiration and interest that the rubies evoked, and arranging for their resetting.

When the rubies, in their new glory, were delivered under guard to Grangefields, Laura locked the door of her room and played with them by the hour as, when a little girl, she had played with her dolls. A dozen times a day she would take them from the safe, and only after wearing the jewels in this seclusion for a long while would she lock them up again.

PEGGY CONKLIN, NEWCOMER TO HOLLYWOOD GIVEN FILM LEAD

Lights and Shadows

By

George Holland

One of Hollywood's "ideal" couples arrived in Boston today, and it is only an avowed cynicism and natural caution which dictates that the adjective "ideal" be enshrouded in quotation marks. The couple is Stuart Erwin and June Collyer, or June Collyer and Stuart Erwin, and the nice part of it all is that neither cares very much which name comes first in the billing. Stuart and Miss Collyer ran into a round of activity arranged in their honor by Victor Morris and Joe De Pisa, their immediate hosts, and Messrs. Addison and Brennan, the other half of the Loew executive forces in Boston.

June Collyer

That section of the Fourth Estate whose chore is the coverage of the theater and motion pictures met the arrivals at the Cocoanut Grove, preliminary to Mr. Erwin's and Miss Collyer's personal appearance at Loew's Orpheum.

Mr. Erwin is one of the most real young men to be encountered—in Hollywood or out of it. Miss Collyer is the talented daughter of a nice father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Victor Hermance of New York. This colum's first knowledge of the young Miss Collyer's existence came a few—well, more than a few—years ago in New York. Her father, one of New York's best lawyers, was telling about his daughter's ambitions in the motion pictures. And her mother was an anxious good soul hoping they wouldn't come true. But they did, and Papa and Mama Hermance are now grandmothers of a sprout who will probably turn out to be a good juvenile comedian. Having met Mr. Erwin once before, we are positive that he will not go into a dither if the remark is ventured that the kid may turn out to be handsome. The mother's side, of course. You should see the Erwins (Stuart and June Collyer) at Loew's Orpheum this week or next. I guarantee that you will be entertained.

Edward Dean Sullivan, author of "Rattling the Cup," "Chicago Surrenders," and "Benedict Arnold," authority on spelling bees (east coast), and mouthpiece for mayors (Boston), has sold a story called "Bad Penny" to Select Pictures, and Walter Huston, the eminent star of "Dodsworth," at the Shubert Theater, New York, is reported as about to double between his show and the leading role of the picture. Overjoyed at the news of Mr. Sullivan's return to form, this department wagered two dollars ($2) on the nose of a nag called "Bad Penny" which ran yesterday at Lincoln Fields. "Bad Penny" paid thirty dollars ($30) for two dollars ($2). But one had to bet "Bad Penny" to finish second to win that sum. Betting a nag on the nose doesn't qualify for a reward when the nag, or goat, finishes second.

The Owen Davis play hitherto known as "Spring Freshet" will henceforth be called "Coming Spring," and it will open at the Plymouth Theater on Sept 17.

Charles Laughton to Play Role of Micawber in Selznick's "David Copperfield"

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

Universal Service Motion Picture Editor

Copyright, 1934, by Universal Service, Inc.

Los Angeles, Sept. 7—Here's a potential movie star headed for Hollywood and maybe screen fame. Her name is Peggy Conklin, a New York actress with the elusive charm that made Katharine Hepburn and Margaret Sullivan top-notchers. Walter Wanger had signed Miss Conklin for the feminine lead in "The Vanishing American." All of which reminds me Lynn Starling has signed through Schulberg-Feldman to write the scenario of "Peacock's Feather," another Wanger opera.

And if Walter Wanger does release through Paramount, which seems likely, he will make six pictures for them, two in Europe and four in Hollywood. Following "The Vanishing American" and "The Peacock's Feather," "Private World," based on the Phyllis Bottome widely read book, will be produced with Charles Boyer in the leading role.

Micawber, the most widely quoted Dickens character, falls into the capable hands of Charles Laughton. David Selznick, who has cast "David Copperfield" with microscopic care, today signed Laughton to play the man who was always looking for something to turn up. And if David doesn't soon cast young David Copperfield he will have to pay for an extra secretary, to take care of this columnist's mail. Every mother in the country with screen ambitions for her youngster writes. The most amazing proposition was contained in a telegram which asked me to meet an airplane, bringing a boy from the East, get him a test, take care of him, pay his expenses and collect later.

Now I ask you—Who but Hal Roach would have seen a comedy background in Thelma Todd's restaurant. Leave it to Hal to instruct one of his writers to stage a drama at the Todd eatery with Thelma and Patsy Kelly, as a pair of hotsy totsy waitresses. Thelma's restaurant is called Joya San Iguiel, verra', verra' Spanish, and it's on the Malibu road where the elect and exclusive live in summer time. Hal hasn't named his comedy yet but he's open for suggestion.

An expurgated edition of Johann Strauss' life without going too deeply into his romances will be produced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. We are promised an interesting version, however, with Rupert Hughes writing his life, for Rupert will do a noble job. Bernie Fineman will produce the picture and if Sigmund Romberg can leave his radio and stage engagements, he will be back to write the score. But Romberg goes on the air Oct. 6 and he has already made plans to write the musical score for one of the Broadway producers.

Warners have a bet in Hugh Herbert and believe me, they know it. He is not going to be in any small-time pictures for he is too valuable as a character man and comedian to be lost in program flickers. Jack Warner has personally signed him to play an important part in "Sweet Adeline" and then don't forget there is Ned Sparks and Joseph Cawthorn. No eccentric comedian was ever better than Cawthorn in the days when he used to appear and dance with Julia Sanderson.

"Desirable" on Two Screens

By JOYCE DANA

A sweet and refreshing heroine and an altogether light and charming film bring delightful entertainment to the screens of the Paramount and Fenway in "Desirable."

Jean Muir, who first showed her medals in "Dr. Monica," has the task of being utterly naive and adorable, and it's a great tribute to her talents and her good taste that she steers cleverly away from the cloying ingenue, and makes Lois Johnson a sincere, unaffected and lovable girl.

There is to start with the sometimes dangerous triangle of the youthful mother, the attractive admirer, and the pretty daughter. Lois has been carefully shielded from her actress-mother's friends, since romantic leading ladies with 19-year-old daughters are apt to lose popularity on both sides of the footlights.

On the first night in her mother's town apartment, Stuart McAllister, one of the many admirers, lets himself in with a latchkey and finds Lois. The impressionable youngster from boarding school finds him a gay companion, and he finds in her a frankness and enthusiasm that is a welcome change from his more sophisticated playmates.

For a bright young man who is supposed to know his way around, Stuart proves particularly obtuse in waking up to the fact that he's head over heels in love. He even keeps his platonic composure while Helen engineers a match for her child with a nice young man with money. But eventually, with the nice young man's family providing the traditional obstacles, the planned engagement comes to the broken end it should.

As a final bit of unmaternal trickery, Helen intimates to her daughter that she and Stuart have been more than friends. Then come the inevitable tears and pretty tantrums, and the reconciliation which leads to a smart tag line and a happy ending.

Verree Teasdale (the new Mrs. Adolph Menjou), in a succession of dazzling gowns, does a great deal with the trying role of the self-centered mother, and George Brent is unposed and regular as the man she is forced to relinquish to her daughter. Charles Starrett and John Halliday appear to advantage in the supporting cast. But it is by all odds Miss Muir's picture, and brings her well into the top bracket of young Hollywood stars.

Hector Leader at Orpheum

Charles R. Hector, one of Boston's best known musical directors, returns once more to Loew's Orpheum theater. He will resume his post in the pit of the Loew house today.

Mr. Hector has for five years been musical director of the Yankee network, and in the past 15 years in Boston has appeared at the Westminster, the St. James, Orpheum, State, Metropolitan and Uptown theaters and at the Lido Venice.

Charles Hector

His musical education was received in Europe and his first bookings through a London agent were for an extended tour through Egypt and South Africa.

Enrolment Gains at Northeastern

In the first day of registration 363 freshmen enrolled at Northeastern University, according to Milton J. Schlagenhauf, director of admissions.

The present list of new students shows a gain of 43 over that of last year.

Poe's Mystery At Fine Arts

A striking and unusual film had its first Boston showings at the Fine Arts Theater yesterday, where Edgar Allan Poe's famous mystery story, "The Tell-Tale Heart," headed a new double feature bill.

Notable for its exceptionally artistic and imaginative directing, "Tell-Tale Heart" brings Desmond Hurst to the front ranks of movie directors. Not more than 20 miles from London, he has achieved marvels of imaginative and beautiful photography, and with a notable cast of English screen stars, has made the thrilling Poe murder story into a memorable film.

"Tell-Tale Heart" presents Norman Dryden in the leading role of the tortured young man who murders his companion, conceals the corpse of his victim beneath the floor, and is driven to desperation and confession by the maddening persistence of the fancied beating of the dead man's heart beneath the floorboards.

Mr. Dryden is a consummate artist and has able assistance from an excellent supporting cast which includes a charming young English screen beauty, Yolande Terrell, and John Kelt.

On the same program is a return showing of the charming Mozart operetta, "The Forester's Daughter," which in addition to the delightful score, has the advantage of having those two popular favorites of "Zwei Herzen," Gretl Theimer and Will Forst in the leading roles.

DR. CRILE HOLDS MAN'S REASON CAN CURE ILLS

By Associated Press

Chicago, Sept. 7. By the proper exercise of reason, Dr. George W. Crile, noted Cleveland surgeon, believes man should have the power to ward off nervous breakdowns, goiter, stomach ulcers, gall stones, one variety of diabetes, certain diseases of the heart, and protruding eyes.

These ailments were described by Dr. Crile at the World's Fair program of the American College of Surgeons, as the "diseases of civilization" which are rarely found in the lower order of man or in lower animals.

Their relatively high presence in civilization, he said he believed resulted from the high development of the "energy system" consisting of the brain and thyroid gland. He said:

CONTROLS EMOTIONS

"The brain and thyroid gland supply civilized man with his power of sustained energy and activity—mental, emotional and physical. The adrenal—sympathetic system, which in turn is maintained at a constant level of activity by the thyroid and is given outbursts of activity by the brain—is the most active in expressions of emotions.

"This group of executive organs is primarily responsible for the state of civilized man. Therefore the diseases which are peculiar to civilized man, we can trace clearly."

These diseases may be primary, as when the brain maintains too high a state of activity and when a nervous breakdown results, or when the thyroid runs wild and exophtalmic goiter results, he explained.

But when the brain and thyroid stand the strain of high speed civilization, some weaker organ may give way. In this class he said falls certain types of heart disease, diabetes and stomach ulcers.

REASON IS BEST TOOL

He said surgery could bring a cure sometimes, when the sympathetic nerves connected to the adrenal gland is severed thus preventing it from serving as an emotional whip to the body.

But he suggested what he termed a more hopeful and general non-surgical remedy. He said:

"Man cannot lessen his brain capacity, he cannot lessen his glandular power, but he has at his disposal the use of the finest tool civilization has wrought—namely: his reason. The civilized fraction of man should be able to control the wild fractions inherited from his long past."

Dr. Crile said Elizabeth Barrett Browning and other "brilliant invalids" of history were victims of a disease of civilization "neurocirculatory asthenia" where the person is brilliant in mental effort although subject to symptoms of the ailment.

Everett Tax Will Jump

An increase of between $4 and $5 in Everett's tax rate is certain this year, assessors state. Last year's rate was $31.70 and the previous year it was $40.40.

Meets 'True' Love

HEIRESS BRIDE OF 17 FINDS NEW 'IDEAL'

By Universal Service

San Francisco, Sept. 7. Collette Justine Mulvihill Green, 17, blond Pittsburgh heiress came bouncing into this city on an airplane.

With her came the low-down on her romances in which she jilted a Spanish grandee, eloped with a truck driver, forsook her true love and now eschews weddings but not men.

After posing grudgingly for photographers Collette then repaired to a night club.

There she danced. She sang hotcha torch songs. And in between these occupations she expounded her philosophy and personal experience about love, marriage, her ideal man (his name is Sammy) and a determination not to go to bed before her boat sails for Honolulu Saturday.

Collette's own story of her romantic misadventures was told between shivers and cigarettes. She said:

"I'm through with love—well, anyway, with marriage—and I'm going to live in single-blessedness. I was engaged to 'Sid' when I came back from Manila where I was with mother."

"Sid" is Sidrian Paredes, son of the speaker of the Philippine legislature.

Incurables Aided by New Vitamin 'C' Discovery

By Associated Press

Aberdeen, Scotland, Sept. 7. Pure vitamin "C" will conquer heretofore incurable ailments and will bleach complexions darkened by disease, the British Association for the Advancement of Science was informed today.

Among the diseases which it was said to conquer are certain forms of hemophilia, various types of hemorrhages and pyorrhea.

These unexpected medical uses for the vitamin, in its pure form, were described by Professor A. Szent-Gyorgyi, one of the leaders in isolating the substance.

Vitamin C's role first appears in history when Capt. Cook discovered that eating citrus fruits would both prevent and cure the scurvy that made morgues of sailing vessels on prolonged voyages. The vitamin itself was recognized only about a decade ago.

Until the last two or three years, human access to its benefits had been limited mainly to eating oranges, lemons, tomatoes, spinach, cabbage, lettuce and some other foods which contain it in small, greatly diluted amounts.

OUSTED SEA GULL MOURNS BANANA DIET

"Spooks," the banana-fed house-dwelling pet seagull of Nahant Head, North Shore, was trying to acclimate himself today to the great open spaces and a diet of fish.

Mrs. William Friese, whose summer cottage at the Head has been "Spooks'" home since his nestling days, has at last, reluctantly, barred her door against him. And her windows too.

For "Spooks," very plainly, can't be taken along when Mrs. Friese [illegible] back to her winter residence [illegible] Court, Roxbury [illegible].

"Spooks" didn't like his exile from civilization today. [illegible] were just a thrill to thousands of other less pampered gulls. [illegible] "Spooks," the house dweller, preferred the tepid fresh water bath which Mrs. Friese always had ready for him in a basin by the stove.

He fluttered all day [illegible] Friese cottage windows. [illegible] weren't wild [illegible] those of other [illegible] They were puzzled [illegible]

CONGRESS WILL ACT ON RIVAL RAIL PLANS

By Associated Press

Washington, Sept. 7—Congress probably will be called upon this winter to decide whether the railroad rehabilitation plans of the carriers themselves or of the National Administration shall prevail.

This appeared in the making today as Joseph B. Eastman, Federal Railroad Coordinator, studied administration plans while the carriers contemplated proposals to band themselves into an institute for coordination of the Nation's major transportation system.

TWO PLANS DRAFTED

The two plans are expected to make their appearance in the usual public hearings on proposed legislation, with Congress to decide which of the two—or what parts of both—should be adopted.

It was indicated at Hyde Park that J. J. Pelley, President of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, would become head of an unofficial unit of the carriers. Pelley conferred this week with President Roosevelt.

At present, the railroads maintain three organizations with headquarters in Washington—the American Railway Association, the Association of Railway Executives and the Bureau of Railway Economics.

A plan has been proposed by some executives for consolidating the three agencies into one organization.

WOULD CALL ON I. C. C.

In railroad circles here today it was said, however, that pending the outcome of the plea of the Association of Railway Executives for an increase in freight rates the plan had been laid aside.

Eastman recommended at the last session that the Interstate Commerce Commission take over control of rail, highway and air transportation.

Leslie Craven, a technical expert on Eastman's staff who proposed last January that railroads be controlled by a series of federal corporations, is understood here to be working on an elaboration of his plan.

KITCHIN ALIVE, ENDS HUNT

Attorney Claude Kitchin, 32, "missing" son of the late Congressman Claude Kitchin of North Carolina, walked into the Lynn police station today and reported himself alive and well. He has been staying, he said, on State road, Swampscott, knowing nothing of any search.

Kitchin declared he is anxious to get in touch with John G. Mills, Jr., a cousin, who came here from Raleigh, N. C., and asked police to help locate him. Mills had checked out today from his Lynn hotel.

According to Kitchin, his first knowledge of a hunt being made for him was when a Salem police officer, recognizing his automobile registration number, halted him and asked him to visit police headquarters. There he was advised to communicate with Lynn authorities.

Woman's X-Ray Death Accident

By International News Service

New York, Sept. 7—Convinced that the death of Mrs. Sophie Hollotta Berger, 55, was due to accidental electrocution, police today undertook the examination of the X-ray apparatus in the office of Dr. Samuel Friedman.

Mystery surrounding the woman's death Wednesday, was dispelled by the report of Dr. Thomas A. Gonzales, deputy chief medical examiner, after an autopsy had been performed.

He declared that Mrs. Berger apparently had suffered a fatal shock while the physician was attempting to X-ray her head.

Two Beaten Up in 'Cleaner' Strike

Chicago, Sept. 7 (AP)—First violence has cropped out in the Chicago cleaning and dyeing industry lockout which displaced 3000 employes. Harold Cohn, 18, clerk, and Roger Freeman, 30, Negro presser, were slugged by rioters last night as union workers prepared to picket nonunion plants.

The alleged assailants, both Negroes, were arrested.

150 Chickens Die as Cab Hits Truck

New York, Sept. 7 (AP)—One hundred fifty killed but undressed chickens littered a Chelsea section corner (10th avenue at 23d street) today after a taxicab had collided with a poultry truck bearing 420 crates of live chickens.

20 INJURED IN RIOTING AS AGITATORS STIR FERA WORKERS

By Universal Service

Phoenix, Ariz., Sept. 7—Twenty persons were seriously injured in rioting here when several hundred agitators attempted to drive FERA workers from relief jobs.

The rioters were dispersed by police and sheriff's deputies, who used tear gas and riot clubs. Twenty-four rioters were held on charges of rioting and assault.

Deputy Sheriff Lou Rogers was hit on the head by a brick during the melee and may die from his injuries.

Governor Moeur notified Adjutant General Oscar Temple to hold a company of the Arizona national guard "in readiness" in case the police were unable to cope with further demonstrations. He said:

"I am not calling out the guard, but I want it ready in case we need it."

Gorman renewed his de[illegible] of use of National Guard units in the South, and asserted "these units are being used against the strikers and in behalf of the mill owners." He added

"In the face of this action, we propose to ask the federal government to use its military forces, wherever it may be necessary, for the protection of textile workers, who in this strike have acted within their rights under the law."

Both sides held their own in the strike today with the [illegible] total of 360,000 idle in the industry unchanged from yesterday.

Rain Dampens Pickets' Spirit

In the Carolinas, where seven strikers and strike sympathizers met death yesterday in fighting, "flying squadrons" rested and rainy weather dampened the enthusiasm of pickets.

Public funeral services for five of the six killed at Honea Path, S. C., yesterday were announced for tomorrow. Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the strike committee, said that he would attend the funeral and Norman Thomas, Socialist leader, announced that he might speak at the ceremony.

The lull in strike activities, however, did not cause a relaxation in guard duty at the mills. Some 50 national guard companies continued on duty and occasional reports of "flying squadron" visits caused deputies to be hurriedly armed.

A group of fifty or sixty persons picketed the offices of the Cotton Textile Institute in New York City. George Sloan, president of the Institute, said that his information indicated that more men were at work in cotton mills in the south today than yesterday.

"Tide Turning," Says Strike Leader

Conflicting views of the situation from the employers' viewpoint were expressed last night. George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton Textile Institute, said "The situation is decidedly better than last night" and "the tide is turning." On the other hand, Arthur G. Beese, spokesman for the woolen textile manufacturers, asserted the strike was "far more serious" than the previous day and said the number of mills closing had been "tremendous."

Any hope, that President Roosevelt's inquiry board would be able to start arbitration proceedings, was dashed by Gorman, who declared that if an arbitration proposal is made "we shall a[illegible] only after we have c[illegible] the [illegible] of the ind[illegible]."

John J. Edgerton, president of the Southern states industrial [illegible] President Roosevelt [illegible] textile employes is clearly a strike more against the government, the National Industrial Recovery Act, the code system and constituted authority than against the affected employers of labor."

Deaths Deplored By Both Sides

Both Gorman and Sloan deplored the deaths resulting from the textile warfare. S[illegible]

"All other questions, have been replaced by one paramount issue. Ten lives have been needlessly sacrificed in conflict over the inalienable right to work."

"Are the men and women free to work? Will the constituted authorities permit a lawless group to set up invisible super-government, imperiling life, liberty and property, the freedom of speech and the freedom of the average man and woman to go about his daily occupation without fear?

"It is unmistakably clear that the great majority of employes in the industry wish to continue work. In community after community, every employe of the mills desires to continue at work. Widespread terror threatens that right."

Gorman said

"We are deeply concerned about violence in the strike. There has been an appalling breakdown on the part of those who should be peace officers. They have either lost their heads or gone completely over to the service of mill management, like mercenaries."

Police, Strikers Unite to Silence 'Red Flame'

By Associated Press

Fall River, Sept. 7—The "left wing" was in town in a blue dress today and the United Textile Workers of America and the Fall River police are all a-dither about it.

These two organizations, literally at blows with one another a day ago in the militant picketing and rioting which closed the textile mills of the city, now stand shoulder to shoulder against an attractive blonde young woman.

She is Miss Anna Burlak, "Red Flame" of communistic activity in industrial warfare throughout the East and especially in New England.

INSPIRED ORATORY

Yet when [illegible] opportunity pre[illegible] [illegible] to address a crowd [illegible] which she never fails to seize whether her audience numbers 10 or 10,000—her intense inner fire flames forth in inspired oratory that can turn the average curious crowd into something approaching a revolutionary mob.

Authorities everywhere consider her dangerous anywhere.

So yesterday when the report of her coming spread to this Southern New England mill center, authorities immediately got busy.

So too did the United Textile Workers' Union, an affiliate of the American Federation of Labor, which is somewhat more vehement in its hatred of communism than even the great capitalists.

It was learned the the Migberry Stadium, local athletic field and parade ground, had been hired for a meeting later that afternoon and a $10 deposit paid. Authorities discovered the Red Flame was on her way from New Bedford to address the meeting.

An official of the U. T. W. warned Ar[illegible], manager of the park that there was danger "the boards would be torn from the stadium" if she were permitted to speak.

Police also rather pointedly suggested that it would be a good idea, if the reservation were cancelled.

"FLAME" TURNED AWAY

When people tried to enter the park they were met at the entrances by police, who informed them there would be no meeting.

A short time later, the "Red Flame" approached in a blue coat. She was greeted by a delegation of officers, and turned away.

As she started to walk down the street, a number of reporters fell in with her, forming a sort of parade.

Over a soft drink, she said:

"The union and police want me to leave town. That's one reason why I won't. I'll have my meeting before I do."

ANNA BURLAK

Today, with the attractive Anna apparently still in the city, both police and the union were wondering where and when the Red Flame would flare.

5 NEAR DEATH IN LOST PLANE

phone to the Boston office of the American Airways and the passengers were taken here to arrange for transportation to Chicago. The plane, undamaged, was left at the airport in charge of a mechanic to await better flying weather.

Pilot Shannon told the story to a Boston Evening American reporter, who arrived at the field shortly after the plane had landed:

"We took off from Newark, N. J., at 12:45 a. m. The ceiling was low at the start, but the visibility increased as we neared Albany airport in New York state.

"Then we suddenly smacked into a driving rainstorm and the radio went out. We were helpless, without means to call for aid or check the course.

"I circled, trying to get a bearing. Through the intermittent storms and heavy fogs, I could see city lights as I brought the ship down a bit.

"The situation got worse. Once I thought I was over Pennsylvania. Then, with the ship at only 300 feet elevation, I spotted a chimney with the words "Lowell Airport," and an arrow.

"It was hard to land. The ceiling was bad there and the rain made it worse. We made it. It was 6:30 when we checked in."

Then he added:

"I was worried all right.

The drama of the lost plane was intensified by the alarms that sounded over radio and telephone in practically all Eastern cities during the hours of search for the ship.

Shortly after the radio went dead and no signals were heard from the cruiser, Newark airport officials sent out the first alarm. Police took it up.

Dillinger Gets Novelist's 'Thanks'

New York, Sept. 7 (INS)—The country's crime problem is "not nearly so hopeless as we thought it," Rupert Hughes, novelist declares in the October issue of Cosmopolitan magazine.

Hughes adds:

"Thanks to Dillinger, we now have at least acts of Congress which empower federal officers to make arrests without stopping to secure local warrants."

TEXTILE STRIKE WATCHED BY ROOSEVELT

Hyde Park, Sept. 7—President Roosevelt watched efforts of his special textile strike board closely today for a solution of the dispute.

He kept informed of developments, asking for all reports, but he was leaving full responsibility for federal negotiations with the board, headed by Governor Winant of New Hampshire. Until this board makes its report there is little likelihood of direct action by the President.

The list for the summer White House today was tentative and included Walter Donham, dean of the Harvard Business school.

There is every indication of keen interest by the President in the railroad situation. The name of J. J. Pelley, president of the New [illegible] be mentioned as a probable man to head up a re-organized group of rail executives to bring about reforms and press the "comprehensive" rail legislative program now taking shape.

LABOR POST FOR STRIKE CHIEF

By Associated Press

New Britain, Conn., Sept. 7—J. Nicholas Danz, director of the textile strike in Connecticut, today stood as the new president of the State Federation of Labor, having defeated Arthur Wallace, retiring head, in his fight for re-election.

The convention, which ended the most turbulent session in its history last night, re-elected John J. Egan of Bridgeport as secretary-treasurer.

Six vice-presidents were chosen, William F. Steinmiller winning the Hartford post from his only rival, Francis X. Miller.

The convention closed with a resolution favoring a boycott of German made goods until the German government recognizes the right of the people of Germany to organize into trade unions and ceases its persecution of Jewish people.

PUBLIC RITES FOR VICTIMS

By Associated Press

Greenville, S. C., Sept. 7—John Peel, Southern strike executive, announced today that a public funeral, attended by nationally-known speakers, would be held tomorrow at 3 p. m. for five of six strike pickets, slain by gunfire yesterday at Honea Path.

Francis J. Gorman, fiery chairman of the national strike committee, notified Southern strike headquarters here that he would attend joint rites for the group.

Peel, third vice-president of the United Textile Workers of America, said other prominent labor leaders are expected. Consent of the sixth family had not been obtained early today and it was reported from Honea Path that arrangements already had been made to hold one funeral later in the day.

'Stretchout' Point Is Big Problem of Peace Board

By International News Service

Washington, Sept. 7—President Roosevelt's board of inquiry, appointed to bring peace in the textile strike, faced three big problems as it assembled here today, namely:

1—Adjustment of hours and wages for the 750,000 workers.

2—Finding of the "reasonable point" in the "stretch-out" system in the industry.

3—Fixing of working conditions arising from use of new "labor-saving" devices in the textile industry.

PROBLEMS OUTLINED

These problems were outlined by Major George Berry, divisional administrator of the NRA in charge of the textile industry code. As a basis for their program, the board of inquiry had on hand a survey made by the NRA on the textile industry. Major Berry, explaining the situation confronting the board, said:

"The biggest thing in the strike is to find out the reasonable point in the stretch-out system."

This "stretch-out" system is peculiar to the textile industry. The manufacture of labor-saving machinery is closely interwoven with it. With the development of modern looms and weaving machines, a textile worker will have charge, for instance, of nine looms. An inventor perfects a device making the operation of a loom more mechanical, thus requiring less personal attention for the machine. So the worker's jurisdiction is extended over 11 instead of nine machines.

Major Berry explained:

"Thus the worker produces more goods, but receives only the same pay as he did supervising nine machines. And the production of more goods under one worker's supervision means less employment for others.

"In the differences over the stretch-out system, neither side—the employer nor employe—is right.

"Somewhere between their views is the reasonable point for adjustment of hours and wages, and number of machines. That point is the big job for the new board to find."

Another question confronting the members of the board, Governor John G. Winant of New Hampshire, Borough President Raymond V. Ingersoll of Brooklyn, and Marion Smith, of Atlanta, is the argument arising over placing of employes in company houses, and the operation of company stores.

RIOT GUARDS ROUT STRIKE PICKETS

GOV. ELY WARNS STRIKERS OF BLOODSHED

Rocks and fire hose were used a clash of strikers and workers Barre. State police read the t act at Hope, R. I. Heavily med peace officers turned back ng squadrons of strikers at owhegan and Pittsfield, Me. S ate troopers drove back 2000 at W mantic.

The situation was tense, as po- e and armed private guards mobilized in the cities where s are still operating, to meet the threat of flying squadrons of ousands of pickets, many of m girls, ordered out by Horace A. Riviere, New England strike director for the United Textile Workers.

At Lawrence, the squadrons suffered a decisive defeat, but it was reported another and more concerted attempt of the strike leaders to gain a foothold in the city would be made on Monday.

Governor Ely in his thinly veiled warning that the state stands ready to meet violence with its armed forces, declared:

"The President has gone further than any other American leader has ever progressed in giving assistance to the working men and women of the United States. Under his leadership, the Congress has given recognition to the right of collective bargaining.

Asks Recognition Of Peace Board

"The national administration has set up machinery for the peaceful arbitration of industrial disputes.

"I have hoped that both sides to this controversy would recognize how necessary it is for the welfare of the citizens of this county, particularly those in industrial states, that this strike be immediately adjusted and, therefore, agree to abide by the decision of the very excellent board the President has appointed.

"I agreed that the representatives of the employers have agreed to arbitration.

"I have the highest regard for Mr. Gorman, as the leader of this strike, and believed he has used, so far as he could, all of his influence to prevent unlawful picketing and lawless conduct generally.

"A message from him to the public that he accedes to the request of the President and the resident's board for immediate rbitration, regardless of the present status of the strike, would be, I am sure, gratefully received by the people of this Commonwealth.

"We want no bloodshed in Massachusetts. Requests for state police or military assistance for protecting strike areas have been refused, largely upon the representation of the leaders of this strike tht no violence would be indulged in by them or by their men.

Pleads With Strikers To "Listen to Council"

"I baeg of the men nd women, who have left their places of employment in protest against conditions as they see them, to listen to the calmer councils of those to whom they have entrusted the leadership in this crisis, both in the interests of American government and in the belief that in the long run, peaceful methods will obtain better and more equitable results.

"It would be a source of the deepest regret to me were any circumstances to make it imperative to resort to the use of the armed forces for the preservation of law and order."

While Riviere at Pawtucket was declaring that hired guards would not stop the flying squadrons, the squadrons were encountering their first major defeat in the Lawrence skirmish that was really a coup for police.

Word that flying squadrons were converging on Lawrence was received from different points during the morning hours and police were fully mobilized. Andover police were out in force and a guard was established at the Andover-Lawrence line.

City Marshal Charles A. Vose, of Lawrence, and Police Chief eGorge B. Dane of Andover were in charge of the combined forces that forced the cavalcade of nearly a score of machines to a halt.

The occupants of all cars were questioned and the cars were searched. Marshal Vose read the riot act and then made a speech:

"You are not wanted in Lawrence. We have the word of your boss that he is not allowing picketing in Lawrence and we have no use for you here. There are only a few working anyway and those who are working want to keep on working.

"Now turn around (he shouted) and keep going—South."

Six Cars Elude Police, Is Report

Five men in one car, held up at the line, were taken to Andover police headquarters. It was reported five or six cars had eluded the police, and that those who arrived in them were in the city.

One car that got through the line was held up by a secondary line of defense and five men in hat machine were taken to Lawrence police headquarters. They were released after Marshal Vose had extracted promises from each never to return to Lawrence. None would say who was the leader of the squadron.

The Barre clash occurred at the gates of the Barre Wool Combing Company and resulted in the shutdown of the mill, which employs upwards of 300 hands.

A flying squadron of 300 pickets from Worcester was greeted by streams from the plant fire hoses. Both workers and strikers hurled rocks, but no injuries were reported. The mill closed for protection of its workers, after the squadron had returned to Worcester.

At Hope, R. I., 400 strikers in a flying squadron from Pawtucket surrounded the Lonsdale mill. Steel-helmeted state police held their lines and the riot act was read by Captain Jonathon Harwood. The picket squadron melted away and the plant remained open.

Crey-clad Troopers Block Squadron

A serious clash threatened at Pittsfield, Me., for a few minutes, when 500 strikers in a squadron sent out from Waterville swooped down on the mills of Lancey D. Milliken, Inc. In contrast with the 500 strikers, there were only seven workers in the small plant. Two grim state troopers and six deputy sheriffs with shotguns stood at the mill entrance. Strikers held a mass meeting and the situation was still menacing.

The largest flying squadron numbering 2000, moved on Willimantic to be confronted by stolid walls of grey-clad troopers and details of special deputies. They attempted to prevent 1800 workers from entering the American Thread Company, but apparently awed by the display of police strength, they did nothing more drastic than jeer the workers.

The threatening situation in Lawrence was duplicated on a smaller scale in Dighton. There, awaiting a flying squadron supposed to be en route from Fall River and the Blackstone Valley, 150 private guards, imported from New York, joined 75 specially deputized mill workers behind the sandbag-sandhill barricades, thrown up in the vicinity of the big Mount Hope Finishing Comany plant.

The Mount Hope mill officials reiterated their determination to keep operating and there was no defection from the ranks of their 1000 employes this morning.

Other minor concentration points for the flying squadrons were reported to be Maynard, Fitchburg, Worcester, Biddeford, Me., Pawtucket and Bristol, R. I. and Willimantic, Ct.

UNION WINS IN STEEL LABOR ELECTION

By Associated Press

Huntington, W. Va., Sept. 7—The nation's first government supervised steel labor election has resulted in a victory for the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

The election was ordered at Pittsburgh August 16 by the recently created National Steel Labor Relations Board on a complaint of the association that the company refused to recognize it, although a majority of the employees of the West Virginia Rail Company were members.

At the conclusion of the election last night Lee R. Dewey, U. S. Labor Department conciliator, who supervised the election, announced the vote for representation was:

Amalgamated Association	237
Huntington Steel Workers Association	131
Other persons or organization	7
[illegible]	25

The [illegible] in the election was whether workers wanted to retain [illegible] with the rail company.

On the election board with Dewey were two representatives of the Amalgamated, two of the Company, and two [illegible] workmen. Under the Labor Board's decision the election will stand for one year.

Textile Strike One of Largest

By International News Service

Washington, Sept. 7—Even though its exact size is still disputed, the textile strike is easily one of the dozen largest in American labor history.

No strike has compared with it since 612,000 miners and 400,000 railroad shopmen laid down their tools in 1922 on wage issues.

Labor Department figures show the largest strike in the last dozen years was the 1927 walk-out of 175,000 soft coal miners. Again in 1928 100,000 miners struck.

Mine strikes have been among the largest of all time.

Since 1927, the first year for which department figures are complete, there have been only 18 strikes which took out 25,000 or more workers each.

GEORGIA—Two women arrested as Communists. Threats of violence shut down hosiery mills.

NEW YORK—Garment workers vote financial aid to textile union and announce strike of their own to start October 1. Tension increases at Cohoes with report that out-of-town workers were to be deported.

NEW JERSEY—Strike leaders announce 20,000 silk and rayon workers to be called out. "Flying squadrons" active at early openings.

PENNSYLVANIA

Threats of sympathy walkouts from other lines of the garment industry are the only apparent gains of the textile strike in Pennsylvania. Neither progress nor loss in the field now covered by the tie-up were reported by the strikers last night.

ELY TAKES FIGHT TO CURLEY'S STRONGHOLD

By BERNARD J. DOHERTY

Primed for a fresh broadside against former Mayor James M. Curley, Governor Joseph B. Ely tonight in the interest of the candidacy of General Charles H. Cole invades the old Curley stronghold in Roxbury.

He will deliver his first stump speech for Cole in the Vine street municipal building, scene of many big Curley rallies in past campaigns.

Woburn and Medford are also on the Governor's schedule and he will be active in [illegible] primary day.

General Cole [illegible] raised a new issue against his Democratic opponent when he accused Curley of having insulted thousands of descendants of the Polish race by turning down the ambassadorship to that country.

COLE FLAYS "BLARE"

The General, in a [illegible] at the "noisy blare and ballyhoo" self-created in an attempt to raise a false impression of general sentiment of the Curley supporters, asserted that the electorate will decide the contest "on the past records" of the candidates.

He declared that Curley raised the same kind of a fuss in 1932 when he got together an independent slate for Roosevelt delegates to the national convention, but was defeated by the Ely-Walsh-Cole delegates on a basis of [illegible] to 1.

Cole maintained that the former mayor has made no visible signs of a comeback, as during the present campaign, he Cole has stood four square behind the New Deal.

He asserted that it is not possible that Curley should have gained strength on the basis of being some sort of a local representative of the President, because people have not forgotten that the former mayor "was rejected for the cabinet and "rejected for other appointments he desired and sought."

Francis E. Kelly, former Boston city councillor, and opponent of the Democratic convention endorsed candidate for lieutenant governor, Mayor Joseph L. Hurley of Fall River, accused Hurley of having voted against the Sunday baseball bill while a member of the legislature.

GLYNN ATTACKS COLE

Pointing to the fact that the much-heralded Brockton rally for Cole with Senator David I. Walsh as the chief attraction, failed to fill one of the smallest halls in that city, Theodore A. Glynn, Curley supporter, declared that certainly nothing produced at that rally was of "hope or benefit to the millions of unemployed in America and the countless thousands in Massachusetts."

He declared that it "was exceedingly gracious of the senator to admit that the voters would not be deprived of participation in the September primary and of affording to Curley the privilege of being a candidate for Governor."

The Walsh argument that Cole should be rewarded for allowing himself to be induced to balance the ticket in 1928 Glynn said was a strange one as to his mind the General had been sufficiently rewarded by the Republican Party after the election of Governor Allen with a job as public trustee on the Elevated road.

OPEN GUNS ON ELY

Glynn further declared that if it was a question of further reward why was Cole "side-tracked" in 1930 and 1932 for Governor Ely. Failure of Walsh to "make unpleasant personal references" against Curley, Glynn said, was because of the implied admission by the senator that Curley would be the candidate on the ticket with Walsh after the primary.

The former mayor, in various rallies, continued his attack on the pre-primary convention system which received its first tryout last April, and pledged himself to the task of working for the repeal of the law.

WOBURN PROBE OF $25,000 FIRE

Police and fire officials today were investigating a $25,000 general alarm fire which destroyed the patent leather factory of the L[illegible] Leather Company in Cross street, Woburn, after an explosion which shattered windows in every house in the vicinity.

The fire was the second in the building within two weeks.

The blaze, discovered by a passerby, spread so rapidly that the entire building was enveloped in flames before apparatus arrived. A hot air explosion occurred immediately after the alarm was sounded, and in less than 35 minutes the four-story wooden structure was leveled to the ground.

Calls for help were sent to Winchester and Lexington. Apparatus from those towns aided in extinguishing roof fires set by flying embers.

2 BURN TO DEATH IN TRUCK CRASH

This Is Life by ROBERT E. ROGERS

The conviction is slowly being forced on us that somewhere in 1929 marked the high tide of feminine conquest of affairs in the new tradition. If the spokesmen of spokeswomen for the pros and cons of feminism are to be trusted, the old-fashioned traditions of women's place in the sun is beginning to prevail again.

Robert E. Rogers

The latest news item confirming this is a prophecy that Mussolini is planning to take all women out of industry. The reasons for the decision, it is reported, are two: First, industrial job-holding interferes with woman's chief job, home-making and child-rearing; and, second, every job held by a woman keeps a man out of a job and, therefore deprives a family of support.

Behind all that, also, is the question of the increase of Italy's population. Mussolini wants soldiers. There is the question of morale. It humiliates man to have to compete with women for the available jobs. Woman degenerates under industrial work while man gains in physical and mental virility.

We may therefore expect in the near future to see the old condition of affairs restored, with man on the firing line and women making the home.

This probably also involves a limitation in education for women and, probably, in athletics and sports, a consummation which would be heartily endorsed by the Church. In Germany there is already a definite tendency to bar women from higher education, or at least to limit the registration of women. So long as the Hitler regime lasts, it is likely there will be very few more women lawyers, physicians, teachers, etc., although the emphasis on women in athletics seems quite as strong as in Soviet Russia.

But the Nazi's most interesting and probably most effective measure toward restoring woman to her old status is to be found in the ukase that young girl graduates from the public schools, if unemployed, shall be farmed out, without pay, to families that will give them homes, while teaching them the art of home-making. In other words, a return to the old practice of apprenticing girls as well as boys in their teens. At the end of the training the girls may hire out for wages as trained domestics.

If some such system were followed over here, our young girls, instead of being totally incompetent to do anything useful—since the high school brand of business training is not at present worth very much in earning a living—might learn women's basic science, actually earn the inflated wages domestics have been getting in this country, and, eventually, make an efficient home for a possible husband. The kind of girl who once told the Missus that she could do "plain and fancy dusting" and didn't propose to do much more in return for $12 a week would become the exception rather than the rule. Incidentally, she was a normal school graduate, unable to get teaching work and a total loss at everything else.

But, we may say, this is continental tyranny under dictatorship But listen to the president of the National Association of Women Lawyers, one Dr. Oliver Stott Gabriel, deploring the fact that even in this country we have gone back to the ways of our fathers before women discovered jobs in business

The NRA codes, she says, are responsible for driving women out of business and back into the home, for discriminating against women, and for undoing the work of fifty years.

Since the NRA, of course, does not affect the professional woman, probably the number of women lawyers will increase (to the presumed joy of Dr. Gabriel). Personally, I can see nothing finer than any tendency or agency which will decrease the number of lawyers in the country, even of women lawyers.

As for business, if the future of American industry is to be one of strikes, strikes and more strikes, perhaps it will be all for the good if women get back into the home and stay there. A woman on a picket line, particularly if she be an aggressive and quarrelsome sort of woman, is not a pretty spectacle, and probably does more harm than good, perhaps even more harm than men do. Fewer women at work, fewer strikes—it's not an impossible theorem.

On the other hand, the secretary of the lawyers' association looks forward to the time when a woman will be President. Mrs. Roosevelt scotched that idea over the radio the other evening. Better woman in industry, even, than woman in politics. But in whatever field they attempt, it looks as if they are going to have a much harder time of it than they were having in 1929.

QUINCY WOMAN IS DYING OF HAMMER BLOWS

While his young wife was dying at Quincy Hospital as the result of a brutal beating, Edward E Smith of Water street, Quincy, today faced court charges of drunkenness and attack

Police were seeking a mysterious man who rushed Mrs. Marie Smith, 25, to the hospital and disappeared without making himself known.

Lying in a pool of blood in front of her home, the 25-year-old mother was suffering skull fracture, evidently caused by hammer blows, severe stab wounds about her breast, made by an ice pick, and the effects of a savage beating about her head and face.

AUTOIST AIDS WOMAN

A neighbor, who told police she saw the woman stagger from the house and collapse in the street was about to call aid when an auto halted. The driver picked up the unconscious woman and hurried away.

At the hospital today Mrs. Smith was reported in a critical condition, and physicians said she had little chance to live.

Informed by the hospital that the woman's name was on the danger list, police went to the house where, they said, they found her husband sitting in the kitchen.

HAMMER IS FOUND

Stains on the walls indicated that Mrs. Smith put up a terrific struggle against her attacker.

Neighbors said they heard cries and loud talking from the Smith apartment during the evening

Police were told that a man, possibly the same one who rushed the dying woman to the hospital, entered the house during the evening and apparently quieted the disturbance

A few minutes later, Mrs. Smith emerged from the front door and fell unconscious in the street.

Struck by Auto, Woman, 72, Dies

Mrs. Catherine Lockway, 72, of Highland avenue, North Needham, is dead from injuries received when she was knocked down by an auto near her home

Harold G. Rosseau of Manchester road, Newton Highlands, who, police say, was driver of the car, took her to Glover Memorial hospital

3, TRAPPED IN SEWER, SAVED IN WATERTOWN

Three men were rescued from death, one of them a would-be rescuer, when they were trapped in a sewer in Spring street, Watertown, today

Michael Farraher and Michael Barnes, both of Watertown, were trapped first when a sudden downpour filled the sewer and forced their legs into a pipe that leads to another sewer

Their calls for help were answered by Hugh Monahan, their foreman, but Monahan soon found himself trapped when he went to their aid

The combination of sewer gas and water soon rendered all three unconscious. A taxi driver, whose name was not learned, and James A. Cuddy, blacksmith in Meister's Wheelright shop, then joined the rescuers

Cuddy hastily fashioned a hook on the end of an iron rod. With the aid of others he managed to hook thee lothing of all three men and haul them to the stret

Firemen were summoned by neighbors and arrived with pulmotors. The three men were taken to a doctor's, howver, without application of the pulmotors.

Malden Streets Flooded by Rain

During the height of the rainstorm today the sidewalks on Pearl street, Malden, between Malden and Oakland streets, became flooded when the catch basins failed to carry the storm water away.

An emergency crew from the street and water division arrived at the scene and worked for more than one hour before the condition was relieved. Fearing the water would enter the adjacent cellars, residents in the neighborhood flooded the authorities with telephone calls.

Dorchester Boys Stray From Homes

Two Dorchester boys were being confined to their respective back yards today after their disappearance caused worry to their parents for more than five hours yesterday. The children, Douglas Clarke, 4, of Harvard street, and David Gamble of Chamberlain street wandered from their homes into the heart of the city. They were found strolling along Washington street

Wheeled Way Over Europe

Summer vacationers thronged home aboard the S. S. Caledonia of the Cunard Line. Among the passengers were Miss Barbara Cox, above, of Newton. With friends, she saw much of Europe by bicycle. They pedaled their way through historic Scotland, Ireland, England and Germany. She was photographed as the boat docked at East Boston yesterday. WALL OF FLAME GOES 30 FEET INTO AIR

Two truckmen—one of them Howard Spellman, 22, of 10 Grovenor road, Jamaica Plain—were fatally burned and two others are dying after three trucks collided today on the Boston Post Road in Larchmont, N. Y

Spellman, who leaves a wife and six-weeks'-old daughter, died at 6 a m in the New Rochelle Hospital Bruce Sloan, 28, of Uncasville Ct died there two hours later

A wall of flame shot 30 feet into the air and silhouetted a scene of horror as police, firemen and hundreds of Larchmont residents hurried to the scene of the crash

Domenick Trotta, proprietor of a nearby restaurant, caught up with one of the three blazing crazed victims and with a blow of his fist struck the victim to the ground. It was Sloan. Trotta rolled Sloan around in the dirt and tried with his hands to beat out the flames

Others grabbed the wildly running Spellman and Martel and rendered similar aid. They were rushed to the hospital in private automobiles just as firemen and apparatus arrived

Albert Martel, 39, of Maspeth, L. I., Sloan's helper, and James Watson, 31, of Brooklyn, driver of the truck on which Spellman was riding, were reported dying.

Henry La Casse, 28, of New Britain, Conn., driver of the third truck, was held by the Larchmont police on a homicide charge.

Job Growth Shown by State Report

More jobs open, more jobs given and more applications for jobs were shown today in a report of the Massachusetts State Employment Service for the month of August. In the men's division, the report said jobs for experienced asphalt workers, tool makers, all-around machinists and deep sewer construction men remain unfilled

A shortage of domestics was reported in the women's division and improvement was shown in the demand for bindery workers

O. O. McIntyre NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 7—Thoughts while strolling: Outside of hating everybody with $2, just what is the Brain Trust doing? About the most finished act in vaudeville; Buck and Bubbles. A magnificent art to get up and just fool. King George looks so be-wildered in the news reels lately.

O. O. McIntyre

One word description of Charles Laughton—loppy. In London they say the Joe Schenck engagement rumor was a publicity gag for a Fairbanks film. Baseball is biggest of all stealers of free newspaper space. Gladys Swarthout sings divinely over the radio these days.

H. B. Warner and Leslie Howard look alike on the screen. A movie magazine says Ned Sparks is a ringer for me. The only resemblance is a dark brindle look. James Dooling suggests Dashiel Hammet's thin man in real life. Some screen stars posted for theatrical club dues in New York would surprise you.

Few New Yorkers discover Brooklyn's Prospect Park. Scarcely anyone recognizes Harold Lloyd along the street without those glasses. Never yet have I seen a Scot beggar. About time for Al Jolson's big belted canary yellow overcoat. And Ewing Galloway's coonskin cap.

Howard Chandler Christy and his battered briar. He came out of a yonder part of Ohio, too. Grand news that Mickey Neilan is making such a directing comeback in Hollywood. I've never yet tried to help one of those crumbling drunks without being abused. Whatever became of Wall Street?

Reefer parties in Harlem are drawing many white slummers, including thrill-seeking maidens who should know better. Two debutantes of a not so long ago vintage are reputed victims. The reefer is a cigarette providing a sort of cock-eyed hasheesh exuberance and is peddled in the cabarets and cellars at 25 cents each. The spread of reefers is one of the growing narcotic problems in the metropolitan area. They are especially indulged by orchestra musicians and those who work long, confining hours. A few puffs, fatigue vanishes and the world takes on a sudden roseate hoop-la. The inevitable and depressing letdown is terrific. Headache, nausea and the jitters.

Paul Whiteman once told me there was scarcely a jazz orchestra without a reefer addict. Under the influence, ordinary clap-trap music becomes divinely beautiful and the casual musician rolls his eyes, sways and seems to himself to be the greatest musician in the world

For several months I was unknowingly the desk mate of a drug addict. He was, contrary to a general theory, meticulous in dress and speech and never joined the boys at Doc Perry's. We used to rag him for not rolling up his sleeves. Instead he edited copy sleeves down and with well laundered cuffs. During the Big Tom explosion in Jersey he and I were delegated to a night shift, a tedious lobster trick. In the washroom I came suddenly upon him beating a spoon over a gas jet. A rolled-up sleeve revealed an arm of fiery red dots. It was one of life's embarrassing moments He never mentioned it, nor, of course, did I. Several weeks later he failed to show up and we never saw him again. He was the only journalistic addict I ever ran across in years of migratory newspapering.

I have been watching a novel experiment at a fly-blown little stationery shop I occasionally patronize off Lexington avenue. The proprietor's son is a window dresser, laid off by an avenue store, and in the interim of becoming a "Little Man, what now!" has been perking up the two windows and otherwise sprucing up the place. From a few straggly customers there is now a fairly steady stream of trade. A clerk has been added and the son, with his new mode of expression, has no desire for another job. Rather does he expect a partnership with his parent.

Ethel Merman is the epitome of every stenographer's dream. As Ethel Zimmerman she was a typewriter pounder in a Long Island City office when a booking agent heard her sing one night at a private party. He booked her into an obscure and dim-lit Russian restaurant in 57th street, where she appeared for $3 a night, holding on to her regular job. It was there Al Siegal, the pianist, found her and launched her upon the subsequent road to fame as a caroller of blues.

Expert Shows Average Family How to Budget Living Costs

By RUTH MUGGLEBEE

This is the third of a series of articles on the increasing cost of living and how it may be met with proper economical measures.

It used to be dollars to doughnuts, now it is dollars in to doughnuts to meet the present day rise in food costs.

Like people, dollars have a way of getting slim or fat and the more they will buy, the fatter they will get.

It is not the dollars the workers earn that count, but what they can buy with their money

For every dollar it cost city workers to live in June, 1933, it costs them this year $1.12.

That's the average change in living costs in 32 cities, as reported by the U. S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. In some cities, costs went up more, dollars got even slimmer

To buy the food that last year's dollar would buy, city workers must spend $1.12. To buy the clothing a dollar would buy they must spend practically $1.14. In other words, food went up 12 per cent; clothing up 13.9 per cent; fuel and light up 5.1 per cent; furnishings and furniture up 13.6 per cent, all other costs up 7 per cent

According to the Bureau of Labor Statistics, this is the way the average working family should divide each of its dollars.

For food, 38 cents.

For clothing, 17 cents

For all other expenses, including such things as insurance, church, movies, newspapers, telephone, cigarettes, medicine and laundry, 21 cents.

Taking these things into consideration, a weekly grocery order for a family of five, including, husband, wife, boy 13, girl 7, and boy 3, as budgeted by Miss Blanche Dimond, nutrition supervisor of the Community Health Association, allows an expenditure of $8.60.

For that amount the housewife may purchase foods that will include all the necessary body-building elements. There will be the calcium for bones and teeth; the protein for growth, muscle and repair of the body; the sugar for energy to work and the vitamins for health and vigor.

With the figures of Miss Dimond, as a basis, a weekly income of $22.50 should be budgeted as follows

Food for family of five for week	$8.55
Clothing	3.82½
Rent, fuel and light, furniture and furnishings,	5.40
Sundries	4.72½

Of course it takes wise and careful management. Of course it requires a keen watching of the family pennies. But it can be done. Using the percentage divisions as outlined, the most limited income can be gauged to effect the best results.

(The application of foods and their comparative values will be outlined in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

NAZI, RED PLOTS HERE PROBED

A conference on Nazi and other un-American activities in Boston was to be held today by Congressman John W. McCormack, chairman of the Congressional committee and state officials.

If sufficient evidence is uncovered, a hearing on the matter may be held later in the fall

Previously, McCormack conferred with police and said that he had questioned Detectives Benjamin Goodman and William Goldston regarding radical activities here.

MAKE UP YOUR MIND TO STAND THE GAFF IF YOU MARRY A POOR MAN

Junior and Roderick Left in Charge of Baby Faith, Flee as Frightened Wails Greet the Visitors to the Nursery

CHAPTER 1[illegible]

AS THE wail of [illegible] daughter, Faith [illegible] ears, I took a hasty [illegible] but Dicky grasped [illegible] in time to save [illegible] any further [illegible] mother-in-law [illegible]

"I know [illegible]" I said, pressing [illegible] fully. "But what [illegible] has happened?"

"Those kids [illegible]" said with res[illegible] echoed his the[illegible] as, with the rest I [illegible] the corridor t[illegible]

A FRIGHTENED BABY

"That's not a [illegible]" Braithwaite said [illegible] went through [illegible] from the hall to K[illegible] ting room. "N[illegible] ger cry. Some[illegible] ened her. I'm af[illegible]

"I'll skin th[illegible]" Dicky said, but [illegible] tween the fero[illegible] and the mildne[illegible] would have set m[illegible] I had not been [illegible] turbed.

And then we were [illegible] sery door, to face [illegible] tense Katherine wh[illegible] ing the baby close [illegible] arms, cradling her, rock[illegible] body slightly to a[illegible] and murmuring that [illegible] formula, "There [illegible]" the baby talk which the most poised nurse can use when the occasion demands it.

"Was Aunt Katherine's baby scared?" she murmured, while I stood aside, not daring to touch my child, yet yearning for her with a positive physical ache of my arms. It was part of the price I was paying for my freedom to devote myself to my career as a playwright which Philip Veritzen, the greatest producer of his time, was pleased to call unusually promising.

"IS SHE GOING TO DIE?"

The baby was quiet now, only a pitiful catching of her breath remaining of the shrill cries which had been coming from her lips. Katherine spoke softly in the same soothing tone she had used in quieting Faith.

"Go into the other room," she crooned. "She's all right now, but I don't want her to see anybody just yet."

Even my mother-in-law made no protest against this dictum and we filed noiselessly into Katherine's sitting room, Dicky shutting the door noiselessly behind us.

At first we thought the room empty, then we saw Junior and Roderick flattened against the wall farthest from us, their hands against the wall as though they were holding themselves from falling. Their faces were ashen, and they had to moisten their lips with their tongues before they could speak.

"Is she going to die?" they finally croaked together.

"I guess it's no fault of yours if she doesn't," Dickey said sternly. "Now you tell me at once what you two young imps have been up to."

Usually obedient, they paid no attention to him, but fixed their eyes upon me.

"Is she going to die, Mum-[illegible]" Junior asked. "Is she?"

There was such agony in his voice, and in both his eyes and Roderick's, that I broke a [illegible] pact to which Dicky and I have adhered since Junior [illegible]—an unspoken agreement never to interfere with the [illegible] either of us is imposing.

THE INQUIRY

"Wait just a second," I whispered frantically to my husband. Then I spoke slowly, [illegible] to my little lad and his [illegible]

"No, she isn't going to die. She isn't even seriously hurt. But I'm not going to te[illegible] a[illegible] thing more. You must answer your father's questions."

But with a howl the two small boys dashed across the room and flung themselves into my arms, sobbing so hysterically in their relief that, if I had not known from experience how mercurial are the spirits of children, I should have been frightened.

"They ought to be whipped," my mother-in-law said heatedly, but when she heard the frantic sobbing of her two young grandsons, which had no connection with her words—I was sure they had not heard them—she made one of her characteristic shifts of attack.

"Why do you let those children cry like that, Margaret?" she demanded. "They'll be sick."

"Don't, Mother," I heard Harriet Braithwaite say softly, and as Mother Graham gives more heed to the opinion of her eldest daughter than she does to that of any other human being, she miraculously kept silent and after a few seconds more of hysteria, I was able to turn the young culprits over to Dicky's repeated demand.

"Now, come clean! Tell me what you did to frighten that baby like that?"

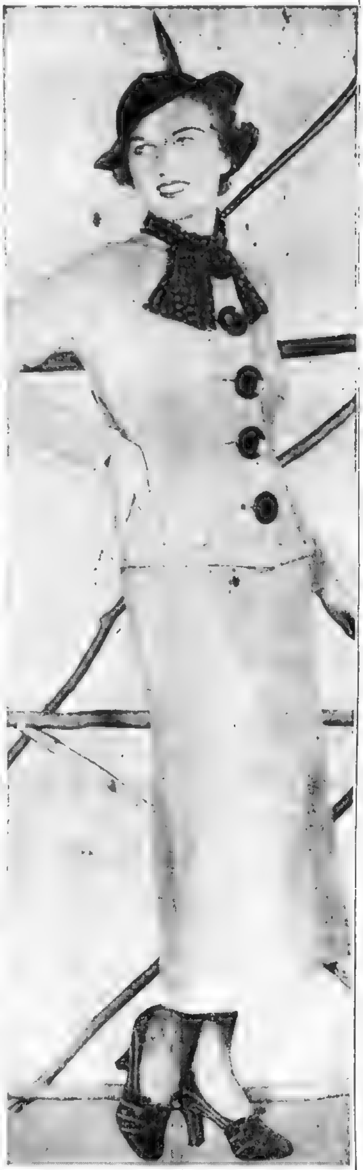
Pieplate Buttons, Coffee Wool



HUGE buttons are a fall fashion fetish, and the polished brown buttons are certainly the outstanding feature of this coffee colored wool crepe two-piece suit. A flock-dotted scarf knotted casually at the throat is part of the brown cotton blouse which is included with the ensemble. Carrying the pert, youthful note to the head, we have one of the most becoming of the Robin Hood versions in felt with a brilliant feather stuck in back. Suede shoes have an interesting laced-toe effect. One of the most delectable budget outfits of the season. For further information on any part of the ensemble, which is from a Boston shop, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her in care of the Boston Evening American, inclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

Belted Tunic Suits for Town

By Dorothy Roe

(Authentic Last Minute Fashions from New York)

And this fall they're more important than ever, what with all the ensemble craze, and the varying silhouettes, and the stunning new woolens that cry for a tailleur.

Suits will be worn this fall for sports, tailored daytime wear and informal evening costumes.

A rough count shows that the belted tunic style is in the lead. The belt sometimes appearing only in front, allowing the back to hang loose, in the already successfully launched "butcher boy" style.

The straight swagger jacket of three-quarter length is still with us, but it is considerably outshone by the new flared peplum styles and the long-fitted jackets, reaching to the bottom of the skirts.

Skirts are slit sometimes, even in suits, and if it isn't the skirt it's the jacket.

There are panel silhouettes in skirts that are new and becoming, and the matter of skirt fastening is a moot question. They may button up the front, side or back. Or, if you like, they needn't button at al.

Cocktail suits are of velvet or the new satiny woolens, an length and fur-trimmed.

Large Parties Bad for Child

By LISA GRENELLE

If we took a survey, I think we would be surprised to learn how few children, especially when very young, really enjoy big parties. They love the idea and look forward to the prospect, but when they get there they are much too scared and confused to get any pleasure out of it.

The idea behind big parties is partly misplaced kindness, partly convenience. Parents reason that if they have the whole class, or all the children of the neighborhood, nobody's feelings will be hurt.

Plausible reasons, but not sufficient to make up for the real damage done to the nerves of the children—aside from the amount of money spent for very little enjoyment received.

Too few parents seem to realize that the most successful children's parties are organized as carefully as any grown-up party, so that the children present are already friends, or at least have the same general interest and are of the same "breed." They forget, also, that a party is less of a strain, easier to handle and more fun, if it is not too large, and that for children in particular it is important that the party should be small enough so they can spread out and let themselves go without being confused, frightened and overstimulated.

If you want to be really democratic and entertain the whole neighborhood, why not give two or several small parties?

Peacock Blue Finds Favor

A miraculously becoming color to blondes, brunettes and titians alike is the strangely beautiful new peacock blue. This odd blue-green shade is made up in dresses which vary from afternoon frocks to formal evening gowns. A most stunning outfit, which was tagged "what to wear for the City Hall wedding" includes a tunic dress of peacock blue crepe, a peacock blue woolen coat trimmed with grey krimmer, a black velvet turban and 12 eyelet oxfords of black kidskin.

Foundation Is Miracle Worker

POSED BY EVELYN KELLY

Routine Care of Dry Skin

Question: My face is covered with fine lines, crow's feet and wrinkles. Please tell me how I can rid my face of this condition.

B. K., [illegible]ughton

Answer: You did not say so but I surmise that your skin is dry. In this case, it needs plenty of cream, both cleansing and nourishing. If your skin is dry, use soap and water on your face only two or three times weekly. Use cleansing cream every night, followed by mild astringent, then apply nourishing cream, smoothing it in gently around the eyes beginning at the inner, upper corners.

Smooth over the face, using an upward, outward movement, from chin to ears, from mouth over cheeks to temples, pressing firmly at corners of eyes and working over crow's feet with little rotary movements. Smooth the cream downward on the throat, then work sides along the contour back to the hair line until fingers meet at back of neck.

Fat Knees

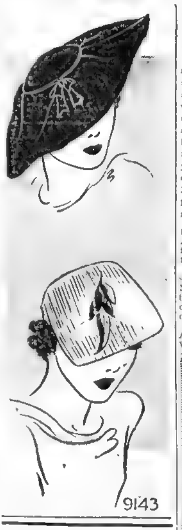
Question: Will you please tell me how I can reduce my knees? The rest of my figure is quite good, but the fatness of my knees causes me no end of embarrassment.

D. G. G., Biegleton

Answer: You must cease being so sensitive about your knees. Buy yourself a pair of shorts and get used to wearing them around your own home.

You must get into a bathing suit and if you do not already know how, learn how to swim. Swimming distributes the fat of the body better than any other form of exercise.

New Berets Match Fall Frocks



By MARIAN MARTIN

PATTERN 9143

This season a woman can be her own best milliner—the sketches left show how. Hats like these are simple to make and perfectly stunning to wear. The upper one is a big, floppy, over-sized beret which you can make of velvet or anything you like. The lower one is a beret with a squarish top which looks particularly chic made of the material of your coat or frock. If you do not wish a feather on the crown it is equally nice without it. Both hats are included in the one pattern, a final and convincing argument in their favor.

Pattern 9143 may be ordered only in head sizes 21½, 22, 22½ and 23. A size 21½ requires ⅝ yard 39-inch fabric, B, requires ⅜ yard 39-inch fabric.

Send fifteen cents in coins or stamps (coins preferred) for each Marian Martin pattern. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, the style number, and size of each pattern.

Complexions Can 'Stay Put'

By Juliet Shelby

HOW to take your place in the sun and still have your make-up stick to you seems to be a current feminine problem. For no woman relishes having a shiny nose, or little beads of oil or perspiration oozing through her freshly applied make-up. There is nothing that will ruin your poise more quickly than to feel all your carefully applied cosmetics melting into one.

To prevent all these beauty evils, my suggestion is for you to get in the habit of using a good complexion foundation. If you do, your whole make-up will profit immeasurably and will 'stay put' much longer.

The complexion foundation that I have in mind is peculiarly adaptable to all skins, the dry, normal or oily, and it is also a grand protector against freckles. It vanishes instantly, leaving a smooth base for your other cosmetics. It comes in two shades, natural and beige.

If your skin is dry, use a little vanishing cream before you apply this foundation. Then with a moist piece of cotton apply it generously, and with your finger tips blend it into your natural skin tone. Rouge lightly, and powder over all. You will look fresh and cool for hours.

Never apply fresh make-up to an unwashed oily skin. That is openly flirting with skin blemishes and blackheads.

And—you ladies who get freckles—never expose your skin to the sun or wind without some protective lotion. This one I speak of is excellent for you to use throughout the year.

All of you, no matter what the texture of your skin, should keep your make-up light until cold weather sets in. You will find a cream rouge more willing to stay with you than a powder rouge, and by all means be frugal with the use of mascara and eyeshadow.

By phoning Juliet Shelby, Liberty 4000, you can learn the name of the complexion foundation mentioned and where it is sold. Or write to Miss Shelby, Boston Evening American, Boston, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your inquiry.

Announcing a Wedding

By MRS. BEECKMAN

Dear Mrs. Beeckman,

My sister was married today and I want to send out announcements. My mother is alive, but does not live in this state. Should cards read "Mrs. Brown wishes to announce the marriage of her daughter" or "Mrs. Jones wishes to announce the marriage of her sister"?

S.

These marriage announcements should be sent in the name of your mother. Like this:

Mrs. Jonathan Lee Brown

Bidding Pyrotechnics Justified by Brilliance in Play

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

It seems nothing less than logical that if a partnership indulges in bidding [illegible] far from justified [illegible] actual bidding, the De[illegible] to apply the [illegible] of technique—even [illegible] the play.

[illegible] an eye witness [illegible] illustrated below I [illegible] exactly how North-South arrived at the ridiculously [illegible] contract of seven spades. I might hazard the guess that the bidding went somewhat as follows:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	3 ♢	4 ♣
Pass	Pass	5 ♣	Double
Pass	Pass	5 ♡	Pass
5 ♠	Pass	7 ♠	Pass
Pass	Pass

But whatever the manner of arriving at the contract, the fact remains that the perverse Goddess of Chance took this occasion to shower her favors on the North-South team. South's failure, therefore, to rise to the occasion was nothing short of criminal. I do not know what conversation, if any, took place between the partners after the hand was over, but I might be so bold as to suggest the following as distinctly in order:

Mr. South: "Well, your worst enemy couldn't accuse you of being timid in your bidding."

Mr. North: "Well, [illegible] dearest friend couldn't claim that there was much to be said for your p[illegible]"

North:
♠ Q 8 3
♡ A K 7 5
♢ A J 10 9 5 2

West:
♠ 10 6 5
♡ Q 10 4 3
♢ 8 7 3

East:

♢ K Q 4
♣ A Q J 10 8 7

South:
♠ A K 9 7 2
♡ 9 8 2
♣ K 9 5 4

The most cursory examination should have told South that his only chance to justify his partner's ebullience rested on a very fortunate adverse lay of cards. It should require no great arithmetical ability to count that thirteen tricks could be made only by bringing home five spade tricks, four diamonds, two top hearts and two club ruffs—this, of course, unless the King-Queen of diamonds were unguarded. The play therefore is not at all abstruse and requires only a certain amount of care.

Mrs. Culbertson will be very glad to answer questions on bridge. Please enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope, and address your questions to Josephine Culbertson, in care of this newspaper.

Little Change in Market Prices

By MARTHA LEE

From Martha Lee's Friday morning broadcast over Station WAAB.

Prices seem to still remain unchanged this week. The food products at the market are gradually changing from summer to fall items.

The first really fall vegetable we saw was blue hubbard winter squash which is a recent innovation in the market. It is selling at eight cents a pound. We also saw some big, rosy MacIntosh apples—grand to have on hand when the children get that hungry feeling between meals. Just now they are selling for 50 cents a dozen.

YELLOW TOMATO

Yams the vegetable which is so much like sweet potatoes—only sweeter are back with us again and cost only three pounds for 25 cents. We saw a different kind of tomato you might like particularly if you want something unusual to serve sometime. It is a yellow tomato, it is larger than most red tomatoes and has the same delicious flavor and a nice firm flesh. They are selling for 15 cents a pound. Another very fall like item is cranberries, the first picking of the season and selling for 20 cents a quart.

Pork and beef continue to be high and quite scarce, but there is a promise of pork becoming a little lower in the near future. For the week-end, the best buy in meat is lamb forequarter at 13 cents, or leg of lamb at 25 cents.

If you have a large family and feel that to buy chicken for them is wasteful and expensive, you will be glad to know that there are some excellent native capons selling for 40 cents a pound. They are very meaty and contain very little fat. They range from 6 to 8 pounds in weight.

FIRST FRESH SMELT

We were interested to find that the first fresh smelt of the season may now be bought. They come from Maine and Nova Scotia. They are delicious little fish and make a welcome change in the menu. Mackerel are the best bet as they are numerous just now and are most inexpensive. Oysters can be bought once more and are 80 cents a quart. And then there are our old stand-bys—haddock and halibut, selling for 10 cents and 40 cents.

Oyster Cocktail
Roast Stuffed Shoulder of Lamb
Fresh Corn on the Cob
Duchess Potatoes
Red Currant Jelly Hot Rolls
Lettuce and Endive Salad with French Dressing

Retired U. S. Naval Officer Is Dead

Philadelphia, Sept. 7 (AP)—A body found in an apartment house early today has been tentatively identified by police as that of John Piper Warfel, 75, a retired lieutenant commander of the U. S. Navy. Answer: Here are the suggestions for your party. They are things that we have made at class and which we know are particularly nice. The color scheme is a combination of green and red carried out in all the courses. We think you will find it rather easy to prepare, much can be done ahead of time.

Question: "Why do Croquettes sometimes burst during frying?"—Mrs. L. H., Newburyport.

Answer: Usually because the croquette is too large. As the filling becomes hot, it expands rapidly and since the surface is sealed tightly, there is not room for expansion and the filling bursts through. Occasionally when the filling is very moist, steam is formed so rapidly that the whole croquette bursts, leaving the kettle full of scraps and crumbs.

QUINCY CHURCH FIRE PROBED

A suspected attempt to burn St. Chrysostom's Episcopal Church, Hancock street, Norfolk Downs, was being investigated today by Quincy police and by Inspector John Reardon of the state fire marshal's office.

Serious damage to the church was prevented by Patrolman Leonard Palmisano of Quincy, who tore blazing shingles from the porch of the building, beating out the flames.

Woman, 70, Hit by Truck in West End

Miss Ida Seigel, 70 of Barton street, West End was seriously injured today when struck by a truck at Cambridge street near Spring.

The woman was taken to the Haymarket Relief Hospital by John Corcoran of East Cottage street, East Boston, operator of the truck. Her name was placed on the danger list.

CLUES HAZY IN SLAYING OF EDITOR

By International News Service

Minneapolis, Sept. 7—Only a [illegible] description of the two assassins led police today in their [illegible] for the killers of Howard Guilford, crusading editor and foe of the underworld, slain last night in a shotgun blast.

Guilford, former editor of the [illegible] weekly publications, The Saturday Press and The Pink [illegible], was driving home when an [illegible] bearing the two killers [illegible] his car to the curb in the [illegible] Pillsbury avenue district. One [illegible] fired a shotgun [illegible] which nearly decapitated [illegible]. The killers paused a [illegible] to make sure Guilford was [illegible], then raced away.

DESCRIPTION IS HAZY

When he was editor of the Saturday Press that publication was [illegible] by the Hennepin County [illegible] jury under the Minnesota "newspaper gag" law. The fight was carried to the United States Supreme Court, where the law was held unconstitutional.

Gambling and other forms of vice were frequently the targets of Guilford's editorial attacks and he complained that his life had been threatened.

In 1927 Guilford was ambushed by gunmen and shot four times in the abdomen. While he was in the hospital an armed assailant made an unsuccessful attempt to enter his room.

Since his recent retirement from active editorial work, Guilford made several radio speeches in which he attacked Communism and the attitude of Governor Floyd B. Olson during the stormy truck drivers' strike.

Police were convinced that Guilford's numerous attacks on the underworld motivated the slaying and ordered a roundup of gangland characters.

N. Y. OLD GUARD FIGHTS MACY

By Associated Press

New York, Sept. 7—Climaxing a longer period of factional strife within the Republican party of New York State, the fight between Old Guard Republicans and State Chairman W. Kingsland Macy was [illegible] open today with control of the state campaign at stake.

[illegible] with Macy's call for a meeting of the state committee next Wednesday, Old Guard leaders struck at Macy's [illegible] and the possible gubernatorial candidacy of Samuel Seabury with [illegible] announcement of the formation of a committee of 300, headed by F. Trubee Davison, former assistant secretary of war—to "promote the election of Republican candidates in this state for Congress and the Legislature."

Such a move, or one of similar objective, had been foreseen for some time as a timed effort to place Representative James W. Wadsworth in a strategic position to obtain the Republican nomination for Governor.

Every effort is expected to be made to draft Wadsworth and to fight the campaign out on the Democratic "New Deal" despite the urging by Macy to avoid issues of national significance.

MANY EXPERTS TO SPEAK AT MEETING

By HUGH F. BRADSHAW

The annual [illegible] on distribution [illegible] September 24 and 25 [illegible] all-star speakers [illegible] such a sparkling roster of experts been scheduled for a short two-day conference. Albert D. Lasker, president of Lord & Thomas Incorporated, will discuss Advertising's New Place in Distribution at the luncheon on the 25th. Mr. Lasker has chosen a subject which we think will be of particular interest to those who take advantage of this yearly [illegible] feature sponsored by the retail board of the Boston Chamber of Commerce. Further than that Mr. Lasker as head of a large advertising concern is particularly fitted to advance the soundest sort of advice. For his experience permits him to draw on the troubles and difficulties of many merchants.

The sudden break in recently featured miners threatens to engulf the entire list for a time. Variously interpreted as marking the end of the inflation move in equities it naturally called forth a number of bearish forecasts. Some two weeks ago we wrote here that for the time being we considered inflation to be slumbering. And said we expected it would continue to do so until the government refinancing was completed. Sudden realization of that fact and apparently inspired story on the earnings of U. S. Smelting found the list vulnerable and prices tumbled.

One of the factors which contributed to market [illegible] particularly in the mining section was the presence of stop loss orders. These had been placed by late buyers of the silver and smelting stocks; who naturally were of a cautious frame of mind following the silver nationalization order. The trader or investor who has partially committed himself to the long side in other directions in recent sessions is warranted in holding positions intact on the theory a slide to the [illegible] area is perhaps the worst one may expect.

Walter Parker, economist — "The modern speculator is a legitimate and wholesome factor in modern life and renders a useful and helpful service to finance, industry, agriculture and commerce. Without him, the whole world would suffer acutely and in many ways."

Paine, Webber & Co.—The increase in volume on the down side in stocks served to offset any favorable impression engendered by Wednesday's market action. Would adhere to recently suggested policy of making new trading purchases only at price concessions.

Shields & Co.—The market remains a highly specialized trading affair, with nothing in sight to change the picture. This Administration has pulled surprises and will do so again. This is the one possibility of a break in the current stalemate for without stimulating governmental action further quiet slide in prices is in prospect. While underway, unexpected bearish happening could influence sharp drop so that cautious trading policy is necessary.

Wall St. Optimism Receives Check as Miners Break

By WALL STREET SPECTATOR

Budding optimism in Wall Street [illegible]

At least it works out admirably to have inflation stocks down and inflation sentiment subdued, the dollar stronger and government bonds rallying briskly . . . Still and all only a balanced federal budget and a conservative trend in the administration would mean the real death knell of inflation, and that seems a long way off.

Whatever the outcome [illegible] some of the boys [illegible] U. S. Smelting [illegible] their ears close to the ground and are garnering a few pretty pennies on the short side of [illegible].

Rumors that the President may go on the air with a [illegible] speech soon are making the [illegible].

'Tis said some of his close advisers are recommending this step to help bring a real fall recovery in business . . . As it is, confidence is growing that the next few month will see at least a seasonal trade upturn, particularly in consumption industries and merchandising lines.

WAGE PROBLEM DISCUSSED BY HANEY

By LEWIS HANEY
Professor of Economics New York University

New York, Sept. 7. The notion that the government should in some way give everybody enough money to live on is becoming more and more common.

For example, I have recently been asked by one correspondent why wages should not be raised by government action so as to balance consumption with production. And another asks: Why not have the government distribute a fixed sum weekly to each person in the country?

[illegible] ways to [illegible] and production [illegible] consumption [illegible] The other [illegible] to decide.

But raising wages would work only to push prices. And if wages are raised prices must be raised. Then the higher prices must be paid by wage earners so their higher wages don't get them anywhere.

Where would the funds come from out of which higher wages would be paid? The fact is that wages, interest and profits all come from the value of the joint product which labor, capital and enterprise make out of the [illegible] of nature.

This joint product is the source of all earned income. When the income derived from production is [illegible] there is less to distribute and workers can get less wages, capital less interest and enterprise less profits.

If [illegible] is given" more wages [illegible] a reduction in the rewards for capital and enterprise. This in [illegible] means less demand for labor and reduced employment.

Then if the government steps in and tries to make work by having men build uneconomic dams, public buildings, etc, it has to pay by raising taxes or going into debt. Such work brings in no income and therefore no earned wages. In [illegible] the government gives the [illegible]. You may call it wages, [illegible] I call it dole."

The proposal to distribute a fixed sum per capita, without regard to needs is just as sensible — though that is not saying much. The money would come from an income tax. The payment would be called "insurance." There would be no fixing of wages, prices, or profits.

Metals Easy in Dull Curb Trading

By Associated Press

New York, Sept. 7. The Curb Market [illegible] in an indecisive fashion [illegible] without establishing any definite price trend in either direction. Many of the most active issues in recent sessions were late in appearing on the tape and generally showed only minor fractional changes from the previous close.

Metal and [illegible] shares, both of which were subjected to considerable pressure in the final hour of trading yesterday, were unusually quiet, but there was sufficient selling to cause further declines of minor fractions in such leaders as Lake Shore Mines, Pioneer Gold, Electric Bond & Share and Cities Service. Wright Hargreaves and American Gas were unchanged.

Oil shares, industrials and specialties moved within an extremely narrow range, with the trend downward. Issues losing up to [illegible] point included Creole Petroleum, Flintkote "A," Hiram Walker and American Cyanamid "B." Swift & Co. advanced a minor fraction. Swift Internacionale held unchanged and Sherwin Williams was inactive.

English Found to Be Large Buyers of U.S. Securities

English investors bought American securities on balance on a substantial scale during August while French investors sold more American [illegible] than they purchased, according to records compiled by the foreign department of Fenner & Beane, one of the largest firms holding membership in the New York Stock Exchange.

The records show that purchasers of American securities for British account last month were more than double total sales, the excess of purchasers over sales being exactly 116 per cent. For the account of France, on the other hand, sales during August exceeded purchases by 3[illegible] per cent.

During the first eight months of the current year to date England has been a consistent buyer of American securities on balance, as purchases have exceeded sales in each of the eight months. In the case of France however, August was the second consecutive month of the current year in which sales exceeded purchases.

Since January 1, to date, British purchases exceeded sales of 113 per cent, whereas French purchasers exceeded sales on balance by 18 per cent, despite the sale of securities on balance during August and July.

RESERVE BANK CREDIT UP

Daily average volume of Federal Reserve bank credit outstanding the week ended September 5 was $2,470,000,000, up $9,000,000 from preceding week and $106,000,000 over corresponding week in 1933.

On September 5 total reserve bank credit was $2,467,000,000, up $4,000,000 for the week. This corresponds with increases of $74,000,000 in money in circulation and $143,000,000 in Treasury cash and deposits with reserve banks and a decrease of $18,000,000 in monetary gold stock, offset in part by decreases of $220,000,000 in member bank reserve balances and $2,000,000 in non-member deposits and other Federal Reserve accounts, and an increase of $9,000,000 in Treasury and national bank currency.

RISE IN PACE OF BUSINESS IS POSSIBLE

By B. C. FORBES

In spite of all discouragement there is at least a possibility that the final quarter will bring appreciable quickening in business.

B. C. Forbes

A notable rise in the stock market may also by-and-by be witnessed.

The wave of submarine builders, it is being clearly revealed, have been as [illegible] as their product.

Business and banking have suffered most of all, not from critics but from traitors within their own fold.

Some day it may occur to taxleviers that one way to raise the necessary total is to eliminate every unnecessary expenditure. If half as much ingenuity were exercised in contriving to reduce taxes as is exercised to hatch up new forms of taxation, all of us would be better off.

A prediction: Strikes have reached their apex and shortly will greatly subside.

A reader offers this as timely for this column:

"There are persons who constantly clamor. They complain of oppression, speculation and the pernicious influence of accumulated wealth. They cry out loudly against all banks and corporations, and all means by which small capitalists become united in order to produce important and beneficial results. They carry on mad hostility against all established institutions. They would choke the fountain of industry and dry all streams.

"In a country of unbounded liberty, they clamor against oppression. In a country of perfect equality they would move heaven and earth against privilege and monopoly. In a country where property is more evenly divided than anywhere else, they rend the air shouting agrarian doctrines. In a country where wages of labor are high beyond parallel, they would teach the laborer he is but an oppressed slave.

"Sir, what can such men want? What do they mean? They can want nothing, sir, but to enjoy the fruits of other men's labor. They can mean nothing but disturbance and disorder, the diffusion of corrupt principles and the destrucion of the moral sentiments and moral habits of society.

Government Bonds Turn Dull

By Associated Press

New York, Sept. 7—With an equilibrium restored following the flurry of selling early in the week, the U. S. Government bond list turned dull today.

Some of the Treasury loans stretched the gains of the previous day to the extent of 2-32s to 4-32s of a point, and Federal Farm Mortgage 3s did a little better, working up 12-32s to 97.24.

Only a handful of corporate issues displayed any signs of life and prices showed a drooping tendency over much of the list.

Sellers of Postal Telegraph 5s and United Drug 5s had to accept prices well under yesterday's finals, the former reaching 45[illegible], off [illegible], and the latter 81¾, off 1¼.

Among the scattered issue showing small gains in the early trading were Canadian Pacific debentures, up [illegible], and Consolidated Gas 5½s, which improved a minor fraction.

Although irregular, the foreign department was able to maintain many of the gains scored yesterday. German 7s, Colombia 6s and Japanese 6½s were firm at fractionally higher levels.

SHARES HEAVY NEAR CLOSE OF MARKET

A number of the oils, rails and industrials were [illegible] U. S. Smelting extended its sharp loss yesterday by some 5 points. Howe Sound, Cerro de Pasco, American Smelting and Sears Roebuck dipped about a point each. [illegible] Telephone, Santa Fe and Standard Oil of New Jersey were [illegible] was somewhat heavy.

HEAVY INDUSTRIES LAG

The Dun & Bradstreet weekly summary reported "definite signs of a strong revival in retail buying during the autumn months."

But there was no evidence of a reawakening of activity [illegible] industries. Stagnation in steel was evidenced in the report that as of Sept. 1 only 61 out of a total of 281 blast furnaces were active in the United States compared with 75 on Aug. 1.

Holiday demand for currency influenced the weekly federal reserve statements. Excess reserves of member banks, which had risen to an unprecedented total of about $2,000,000,000 a week ago, were reduced sharply by a decline of $220,000,000 in member-bank reserves.

A net loss of $15 [illegible] monetary gold [illegible] increase of $74,000,000 in [illegible] together with a rise of $14,000,000 in U. S. Treasury holdings of cash and deposits with Federal Reserve Banks, accounted for the fall in reserve.

The decline in brokers' loans the past two months was interrupted by an increase of $31,000,000, lifting the total to $824,000,000.

HOPEFUL ON STRIKE

While the financial district was none too sanguine regarding the widespread textile strike, the general hope seemed to be that the mediating body named by the President would be able to accomplish something constructive after the controversy has continued for a while longer.

So far as the mills themselves are concerned the opinion was expressed by some [illegible] that, if all of the factories closed the industry would [illegible] injured provided the shut-down did not last too long. The enforced holiday, it was figured, would tend to deplete the large inventories now existing and would put most of the plants into a better position to begin work on goods for the winter and Christmas trade.

The reclassification of the Home Owners Loan and Federal Farm Mortgage government-guaranteed bonds as [illegible] federal obligations to be [illegible] in national bank [illegible] statements was a little [illegible] to the inflationary [illegible] Wall Street. In these [illegible] which brought [illegible] U. S. government [illegible] viewed as an indication that any immediate further inflationary move by the administration was improbable. At the same time it bore out the banking conclusion that the investment market is being watched more closely by Washington.

Federal Reserve officials generally believe conditions in the stock market do not warrant any interference with margin requirement standards laid down in the Securities Act. It is anticipated that the reserve board's new rules to be issued shortly will adhere to the yardstick set by Congress.

The World's End and Sport's Embarrassment Women and Elephants ↕ Alcohol and Sport Mickey's Dilemma Dunlap's Luggage

By AUSTEN LAKE

A MR. WILBUR GLENN VOLIVA, who fancies himself as a journeyman prophet, and, among other things, says that the globe is as flat as a poorhouse purse, predicts the end of the world for Monday at noon.

Austen Lake

This brings a ray of hope to us guys who picked the Cubs and Yankees, last spring, to meet in the coming World Series. But it will disappoint Mickey Cochrane no end. As Babe Ruth says:

"This is going to raise the Old Harry with my trip to Japan next fall."

Also, if true, a lot of college coaches are shortly going to be crimped on a rose-colored cloud, drawing little diagrams and wrangling over the merits of their fall gridiron novelties which did not come off.

WOMEN AND ELEPHANTS never forgive. Many sport writers adopt the iron-clad policy of never mentioning ladies in their essays, lest they receive letters which start: "Dear Sir: You cad."

But here comes Gene Sarazen, the golf genius, who says brazenly, "Wives of pro golfers are the curse of the game."

Well I have heard Bob Quinn on the same subject. For several seasons the old Red Sox headman barred lady-wives of his players from following their husbands to training camp.

And once Bob looked over the edge of his press box porch and pointed to a cluster of Sox wives, sitting together in a grand-stand box.

"There's half the trouble with our ball club," said Bob gloomily. "Mrs. Pitcher says to Mrs. Shortstop, 'If that paralyzed husband of yours hadn't missed that easy roller' . . . and the battle is on."

Bob contended that most holdout tangles in the major leagues was due to wives saying:

"Dear, you're a sucker to work for that price. You are the backbone of this outfit. Joe Goon gets twice as much and is twice as worse as you."

A YOUNG MEDICO, WHO IS WORKING for a liquor prohibition bureau, the names of which I will mercifully conceal writes to me asking if arrangements could be made with several leading pro athletes, "a well-known wrestler, and ditto, major league ball player" to undergo tests for the effect of alcohol on their athletic efficiency.

"We would like," writes the doctor, "to measure such efficiency both before and after using alcohol."

This looks like a grand opportunity for the right young man —say Art Shires, ex-Braves first baseman, who is summering in the Texas badland leagues. In absence of a victim I can offer hearsay evidence about Grover Alexander, who daily fed himself copious drams, and of whom Bill McKechnie, who is a white ribbon Presbyterian, once said: "If he didn't have his alcohol he couldn't pitch."

I might mention the time that Alex was simmering in the bullpen sun during the 1926 World Series, sleeping off an overnight snort, when suddenly he was aroused and put into the game by Rogers Hornsby.

And, wiping the cobwebs from his brain on a slow walk to the box, he struck out Tony Lazzeri with the series money balancing on a hairline. But I doubt that this evidence will be useful to the prohibition bureau

IT WAS JUST A YEAR AGO that Mickey Cochrane, then doing catching chores for Connie Mack, turned in his big super-special custom-bodied car for one of a smaller type, because the upkeep was eating its head off.

That, of course, was before he became manager of the Tigers and collided with what he calls a "hurricane of luck."

Recently some Detroit admirers presented him with twin Fords, covered with Christmas tree accessories. And now they are collecting to give him, not only a Cadillac, but a Lincoln as well, souvenir of Detroit-made goods.

GEORGE DUNLAP WILL BE ONE of the smallest men to start at Brookline in the national amateur next Monday. Yet George, weighing a scant 127 pounds, carries 21 clubs—or rather his caddy-freight handler will.

Many of these clubs are freak trouble shooters, bits of hand-forged jewelry that are called sand wedges, dynamiters, jiggers, baffies, cleeks, etc., which he seldom uses. But he likes to have them around just in case.

It recalls that when John Ball, the 52-year-old Englishman, won the British amateur in 1932, he carried only five clubs—all of them weather-beaten shafts that the elderly wizard used with the same single effect as a country doctor treats his yokel patients with castor oil, iodine, camomile tea, sulphur and molasses and mustard plasters.

THE BOOT IS ON THE OTHER FOOT for Eddie Shore, Bruins' human bomb, as the hockey season approaches. Last year Eddie held out for a larger helping of salary pudding, and for a while threatened to retire to his pig hatcheries and wheat growing.

This year, unless the new management of the Garden whittles down its present rent demand, it may be the Bruins who will do the holding out. No contracts are being sent out as yet, and C. F. Adams may make good his threat to suspend his franchise unless more modest terms are made.

CONSIDER THE DISPROPORTION between the profits and plant costs of the two neighboring horse tracks, Narragansett and Rockingham, and those of the Red Sox and Braves.

In 60 days of racing the horse plants pay off the initial costs ($1,300,000 in 'Gansett's case). Yet here are the Red Sox with an investment of $3,000,000 pleased to tears with the prospect of $350,000 profits for the season, or about 11 per cent on their money. The Braves, with half that investment, may break even.

And they work at it seven months, including training season, banging away for dear life. What about it? Nothing! But it's curious, ain't it?

U. S. Amateur Threat Makes Par Flowers Bloom Under Sand Showers

Scotty Campbell, Canadian amateur golf champion, blasts out of a trap at the 10th green at The Country Club, Brookline, where he is tuning up for the U. S. National amateur tourney next week. The ball stopped inches from the pin and helped him to another par hole. Campbell is one of the very dangerous threats in the crown tourney. (Picture by Boston American Staff Photographer.)

COAST KILLER IS STRONGER AS RESULT OF REST

New York, Sept. 7 (INS)—The weatherman was none too optimistic this morning that they'd be able to stage the Barney Ross-Jimmy McLarnin welterweight title fight tonight. The official forecast for the New York area read: "Mostly cloudy, probably occasional showers Friday and Saturday."

By Max Kase

New York, Sept. 7—The wise men of the science discussed long and loud the McLarnin punch. They argued pro and con on Ross' speed and Ross' left hand.

But they neglected the weather man

Today, as Barney Ross and Jimmy McLarnin wait the word 'go' in their 15-round duel at the Long Island Garden Bowl for the welterweight championship, slated for tonight and sponsored by the New York American and Journal Christmas fund, it is the weather man who bulks as the most important factor

The intervention of the weather dispenser, who rained out the battle last night and put it over for this evening, has changed the complexion of the battle.

The boxing solons have decided the boys will not have to weigh in again this afternoon. As a re-

GEHRIG OUT TO ECLIPSE ALL RECORDS

By PAT ROBINSON

International News Service Sports Writer

New York, Sept. 7—With the Giants and Tigers slowly but surely getting together like a little colored boy and a piece of watermelon, what little interest remains in the major league races is centered in the battle for individual records and personal leadership.

Lou Gehrig of the Yankees is League in everything and he's a sure bet to attain most of his marks.

When the season is over he will have played more than 1500 games for an all-time endurance record. At the moment he tops Charley Gehringer of the Tigers and Heinie Manush in a hot race for batting honors.

TOPS FOXX MARK

His 42 homers put him two up on Jimmy Foxx of the Athletics. He has made the most hits in his own league and leads both circuits in runs batted in. He is third to Gehringer of the Tigers and Werber of the Red Sox in runs scored. He also has hit for most extra bases

Aside from this, Lou has been of hardly any offensive value to the Yanks

In the older circuit, Bill Terry is trying to overhaul Paul Waner of the Pirates for batting honors while Mel Ott of the Giants, Jimmy Collins of the Cards and Wally Berger of the Braves are having a hot tussle for home run honors with the first two having socked 32 and Berger 31

Otto also as his eye fixed on the leadership for runs batted in and runs scored, in both of which departments he is now leading

Ott did nothing to help his team yesterday but, as usual, the Giants had somebody else to supply the punch needed to take the cubs 2-1 in 2 heats. The victory put the Giants nine games upon the cubs and virtually killed what slender chance the Chicagoans might have had of catching the New York entry

TERRY SERVES PUNCH

The game developed into a corking dual between Lee and Parmelee. Galan's homer in the first was the only run made off Parmelee and the first of five hits the Giant's speed king yielded. Successive hits by Moore, Critz and Manager Bill Terry himself after two were out in the ninth put the crusher on Lee and the Cubs.

New Clubs Put Dunlap Back on His Game

By Bill Grimes

After hooking or pushing all of his long iron shots for a couple of days at The Country Club, George T. Dunlap, Jr., the defending national amateur golf champion, discovered that three of his clubs were badly warped.

For some time George has been perplexed over his inability to control his No. 2, 3 and 5 iron shots. Invariably his midirons hooked badly and he was missing his targets by many yards.

On the other hand he was pushing his No. 3 and mashie shots. He was at a loss to understand the cause for the many sour shots that flew off these clubs.

Although he is not one of the worrying type, Georgie realized there was something radically wrong and that something had to be done and done quickly. He was missing greens far too frequently for a champion, which he is in every sense of the word.

Two years ago, when he reported to Captain Francis Ouimet of the United States Walker Cup team, Dunlap was below form. In fact it was only after bitter struggles that he managed to card practice rounds in the low 80's.

In order to get his game straightened out he sent for Walter Bourne, who was his coach at Princeton, and the Tiger instructor was so successful that Georgie turned in one 66 round

WINGATE SUBSCRIBES

After he had exhausted all his own remedies, Dunlap sent for Bourne, who arrived at The Country Club late Wednesday afternoon The Princeton professional was unable to offer any suggestions which remedied Dunlap's ailment and finally suggested that the titleholder resort to a wooden click whenever confronted with a No. 2 3 or 5 iron shot

George was about ready to agree to using this freak club when out of clear sky Ronald Wingate, the professional at The Country Club who had been called into the conference, discovered that three of Dunlap's irons were very much out of alignment.

Wingate called Dunlap's and Bourne's attention to the fact that the head of the No. 2 iron was "shut" because there was a very noticeable bend just above the hosel, while the blades of the No. 3 and 5 irons were "open," causing a push or shank

FISCHER HAS A 71

Fortunately, for Dunlap, there was a wide assortment of the make of irons he uses in the pro shop, and three were selected to replace the bent ones. After the new clubs had been re-gripped, Dunlap went out for another practice session and found his trouble had been cured.

While the champion was replenishing and trying out his new equipment, Johnny Fischer, 1932 and 1933 medalist and twice holder of the national intercollegiate title, was carding a par equalling round of 71, on his first trip around The Country Club course.

Fischer is a master shot maker and a real threat. He was one over par on three of the outward holes and posted a 38 for his first nine, but he had six pars and three "birdies" coming home for a 33.

The Little-Goodman combination was three up at the turn but Fischer's 33 in squared the match Little and Goodman were 73, and Egan had a 76

Almost the entire field was to be in action today, for the late comers checked in this morning with few exceptions, one of which was Jack Hughes, Omaha. In order to preserve the course as much as possible, The Country Club is charging $1.10 admission to watch today's practice rounds. For two days, large galleries have been swarming over the course and the fairways have been noticeably hardened by the traffic.

FERRELL TAKES HILL AGAINST INDIANS

Cleveland, O., Sept. 7—Once again within two games of third place, the Red Sox sent Wes Ferrell out to beat the Indians in the third game of the series today and reduce the margin to a single game

Ferrell, who has won 14 games for the Sox this year, will be without his brother Rick today for the first time since he joined the club The catcher is on the suspended list after a run-in with Umpire Ormsby Wednesday.

Dusty Rhodes put the Sox within hand's grasp of the third place Johnson Tribe. Dusty Rhodes pitched seven-hit, one-run ball and got some valuable assistance from his mates.

Held scoreless for seven innings the Sox came to life in the eighth and socked three runs. In the ninth they scored three more to win, 6-1

PAUL WANER — RANDY MOORE

A wild last stride to first base fails to help Waner as Moore takes Bill Urbanski's throw in the third inning of the Thursday game between the Braves and Pirates at the Wigwam. This effort here was useless, but Waner helped the Bucs to victory over the Tribe, 4 to 1. Paul's graceful action on the base paths makes him one of the colorful performers of the team, as this shot indicates. (Picture by Boston American Staff Photographer.)

Thompson Classiest Braves Recruit Since Wally Berger Came Up

By Joe Cashman

Thompson shapes up as the best all-around performer brought from the minors to the Wigwam since Wally Berger was dug up on the Coast four years ago.

He's a consistent hitter, a standout fly chaser, a real speed merchant and he possesses the strongest throwing arm on the squad. Tommy was picked up in Albany a year ago this month by Scout Johnny Evers.

With both the Watertown and Worcester [illegible] in the Northeastern League pennant race staging lively battles the last stretch of games which conclude Sunday should develop into stellar contests.

Bucs Now Only 3 Games Back of Skidding Tribe

By Joe Cashman

The Pirates' fourth-place threat is becoming real serious, folks. Two straight victories at the Wigwam leave the Traynor troupe only three games back of the Braves.

While the Bucs can't possibly leave town in the first division, even if they grab off the remaining two contests of the series the Tribe will be skating on very thin ice indeed unless [illegible] capture one of these games.

The Warriors [illegible] reached the [illegible] their lack of [illegible] courage [illegible] three runs [illegible] the Pittsburgh pitching which [illegible] it isn't the weakest in the league certainly is far below the class of flinging that will be shown [illegible] by the Cubs, Cards and Giants.

BAZAAR OUTSTANDING IN $5000 WASHINGTON HANDICAP

Mount Washington Handicap, for the seventh day's sport to the New Hampshire Breeders' Association here tomorrow afternoon.

Ten handicap stars of the first water have been entered in the mile and one furlong feature with E. R. Bradley's Bazaar shaping up in my dope as the probable winner.

In taking the Bradley filly, I'm forced to rate her over several thoroughbreds that drubbed her in the Bennington Handicap on opening day. However, under the weight arrangements I believe that she is fully capable of turning the trick.

A. Baroni's Waylayer has been dropped in with only ordinary platers in the mile and one furlong of the seventh race and not only shapes up as the probable winner but as the safest hazard of the day.

IMA GREENOCK, DEADEYE DICK, TEETER TOTTER

FIRST RACE—$800, claiming, two-year-olds, six furlongs:

Mad Bull 113	Kindred Spirit ..108
Veta 103	Deadeye Dick ...113
Buy Straight ...111	Unlawful x103
Teeter Totter ..x103	Ima Greenock ...110
River Rose ...x100

IMA GREENOCK was well backed in better company last out but had scant chance after breaking slowly. With more alert handling, the daughter of Greenock should experience little difficulty in earning brackets in an affair of this sort. DEADEYE DICK was a frequent winner in the West and should offer the contention. TEETER TOTTER stumbled in his last race at Narragansett and would have been much closer but for the mishap.

LADY SABLE, PROSECUTOR, PALASA

SECOND RACE—$800, claiming, two-year-olds, six furlongs.

Apple Fritter ..x105	Liebchen x105
Prosecutor x108	Palasa x100
Lady Sable 110	Maddening x100
Hard Chase 105	Fair Countess ...105

LADY SABLE displayed a nice effort in placing to Sand Cloud in her debut over this course. That effort repeated in this affair would likely result in her earning brackets. PROSECUTOR was a bangup second last out and is dropping weight off that race. PALASA displayd considerable improvement to place to Tabitha last out and will be all dangerous providing she runs back to that race.

HASTY BELLE, KAI-FINN, PLAYFUL MARTHA

THIRD RACE—$800, claiming, three-year-olds and upward, six furlongs:

Newton Belle ...106	Liberty Oak ....x 99
Uppercut x104	Our Sallie x105
Bottled Bourbon.109	Bright Bird x108
Hasty Belle ....x 96	Kai-Finn 113
Playful Martha..105

HASTY BELLE'S last two races haven't been so hot, but she earned brackets on two occasions against fields like this at Narragansett. On best form, she looms all over the winner. KAI-FINN displayed a high turn of speed to win a five furlong dash last out and may hang on long enough to snare the place from PLAYFUL MARTHA. The latter is entitled to some consideration on best races.

ISAIAH, GIFT OF ROSES, ALL FORLORN

Crazy Jane 106	All Forlorn 106
Gift of Roses....114	Flashing Thru ...108
Wacoche 98	Isaiah 118
Polycletus 103	Bamboula 98

ISAIAH is the class of the field. The trotter colorbearer was one of the fastest sprinters to show in the West this season. Since arriving at this course, the son of High Time has been sharpened up with several speedy workouts and is as fit as hands can make him. GIFT OF ROSES wasn't able to get close to the top one at Arlington Park, but she has raced in improved fashion in this sector and is strictly the one to drub. ALL FORLORN displayed considerable improvement to drub Chinese Empress and others last out and figures next best.

BAZAAR, LARRANAGA, ROUSTABOUT

FIFTH RACE—$5000, added, The Mount Washington Handicap, three-year-olds and upward, one and one-eighth miles:

aElf Lock 92	Larranaga 115
Advising Anna ..111	Flying Cadet 102
aMad Frump ..100	Jimmy Sutro 98
Dynastic 95	Bien Fait 109
aRoustabout 102	Bazaar 112

BAZAAR has drawn an outside post position and should escape all early interference. LARRANAGA displayed a corking effort in placing to Advising Anna and is picking up only two pounds off that race. ROUSTABOUT is in under the feather impost of 102 pounds and should be in the thick of contention. Advising Anna won the Bennington with ease, but she is picking up nine pounds off that effort. The Rockwood farm color bearer may fid the increased poundage difficult to handle. Bien Fait's last race was too poor to be true and the Corsicana color bearer will bear watching.

ZEMBLA, BERTJOHN, GABBO

SIXTH RACE—$800, claiming, three-year-olds and up, one mile and three-sixteenths:

High Socks ...x111	Peach Bud 109
Dark Vision ...x107	Zembla x104
Bertjohn x111	Gabbo x111
Light Breeze ...113

ZEMBLA has turned in two excellent races over this distance. Last out she finished third behind Periodical and Plumage, while in a prior effort she placed to Syriac. Off those races, she could stand a world of beating in an affair of this kind. BERTJOHN closed with a rush at a mile and one furlong last out and will evidentally be well suited by the increased distance. GABBO is much better than his last race shows.

WAYLAYER, SWATTER, BYLONA

SEVENTH RACE — $1000, claiming, three-year-olds and up, one and one-eighth miles:

Waylayer x103	Fabius x112
Saint Kitts 104	Inheritor x105
Bylona x08	Swatter x112

WAYLAYER made up a world of ground to place to Hickory Lad at a mile last out. The distance of this affair should be right down his alley. SWATTER came from far back to drub Cheaper Company last out and figures next best. BYLONA was over his head in his last outing. Against this sort of company, he should show to advantage.

PASS, PLUMAGE, MYNAH

Baboo x102	Boy Crazy 104
Ukraine 111	Plumage x106
Cousin George ...101	Past x96
Last Bid x99	Rhodius x113
Jason Lad 101	Guiding Light ...109
Happy Hopes ...110	Mynah x103

Under the light impost of 96 pounds PASS should take the top and never be headed in this affair. A poor start ruined his chances last out and that effort may be disregarded. Prior to that race, he drubbed a cheap field over a distance of ground at Narragansett. PLUMAGE is the class of the field but her best races have all been over a soft track. MYNAH raced well at Gansett and on one occasion earned a set of brackets.

GERTRUDE FLANDERS RUTH FLANDERS

Golf fans at the Boston Evening American's Hole-in-One tournament at Franklin Park were puzzled when the Flanders twins from Jamaica Plain came to try their skill. "Seeing double" was one linksman's explanation. The girls made a pretty picture at the tourney, even if neither was able to "Ace." The tourney is open to all, and continues through next week. Mail Clerks Lead in "Ace" Tournament

Sullivan, Donegan Star After Working All Night

By Sully Kozol

It was a banner day for the U. S. mail clerks—at least two of them—at the Boston Evening American Hole-In-One contest at Franklin Park.

More than 200 entrants stepped up to the specially constructed tee to try their skill over the 120-yard distance with mid-irons, mashies and drivers but when the day's sport was over, two mail clerks, Dennis Sullivan of 12 Delano Park, Roslindale, and Jack Donegan of 110 Milton avenue, Dorchester, were leading the list of prospective prize winners.

Donegan drove a high shot which settled just 2 feet, 2½ inches from the cup.

Lincoln Mutuels

For Thursday, Sept. 6

First total (1-2-7)	$118.46
Second total (1-2-3-5-7)	154.70
Third total (7)	228.26

Then his working partner, Sullivan, stepped out and lifted a beauty that measured just 1 foot 1½ inches from the hole. Just to show it was no idle stroke of luck, Sullivan hit another that came 2 feet, 3½ inches from the mark.

There were only five others who were successful in getting on the green within the 20 foot circle surrounding the cup.

Andrew Bliss, 75-year-old veteran president at the Franklin Park club, was among the entrants. The aged gentleman who was among the first to sponsor the public links under City of Boston ownership, showed that the years need not detract from good golf form and the ability to hit them long and hard.

It is not too late to enter. Entries will be accepted at the tee, the only requirements being that the player bring along five balls and his own club. The balls will be returned to the owner by caddies assigned for the purpose.

Latest to get within the charmed circle are:

LOTT COURAGE QUESTIONED BY TUNIS

By John R. Tunis

Copyright, 1931, by Universal Service, Inc.

Forest Hills, L. I., Sept. 7—"He was too good for me," said George Lott after his unexpected defeat by Bill Feibleman of New York.

He smiled when he said it. You have to hand it to George for his sportsmanship. I do! But what about his courage?

There are several necessary elements that go to make a top class player. One is strokes. You cannot win without a sound game and properly produced strokes. Second, you must have condition.

Condition includes physical health, which means being fit and well. It includes the rudimentary elements of diet, which so few Americans seem to realize.

Last and not least important are the moral qualities which go to make a champion. You must have iron in your soul.

TOO MANY "YES MEN"

All the great players of the world have had this iron in their makeup. Bill Tilden had it. So did Billy Johnston, also Norman Brookes; so, to go back still farther, did Bill Larned.

Is this too hard on Lott?

All right, I take the blame.

There are too many "yes men" in American tennis circles; too many newspapermen and officials telling players how good they are and what a wonderful game they plyed and too few suggesting they a sound forehand drive and a stout heart have won matches in the past and will win them again.

That's why I take my hat off to Frank Shields. What he lacks in strokes, which is considerable, he certainly makes up in sheer fighting spirit.

It would have been easy for Feibleman to have cracked when he lost his service and was caught at three-all in that fateful fifth set. More power to him!

ALSO BEATEN BY PARKER

Physical condition also entered into Lott's defeat. To have been taken to five sets last Saturday by Marco Hecht; to drop that final at Rye on Sunday to Frank Parker and then to lose to an unranked veteran here at Forest Hills speaks eloquently of Lott's physical and mental balance.

A varied stroke player, a cunning tactician, an Internationalist with years of experience, went down before a man to whom he shouldn't ordinarily drop a set. The only player Fred Perry really feared, and rightly too, is removed from his path. Lucky Perry.

And unlucky Lott. Yes, but something more than unlucky, because he has the physique, the shots and, most of all, the intelligence to become a champion of champions.

Yes, and if Shields only had the tennis brains and the strokes of Lott.

HUSKIES INTACT NEXT MONDAY

Seven lettermen are still missing from the Northeastern University grid camp, but all have informed Coach Al McCoy that they will appear Monday morning.

Sharkey Referee of Battle Royal

Jack Sharkey, former world boxing champion, will again be the fifth man in the ring, in a big Battle Royal, in Mechanics building, next Tuesday night.

The men who are to grapple in the "free for all" will be Tony Papalino, Ted Germaine, Red Reilly and Gil La Cross.

Southpaw Finals Scheduled Today

Semifinalists in the New England left-handed gold championship at New Sandy Burr are Brice Evans, Spencer Brainerd, Roy Replogle and T. J. Foley.

Both semifinals and finals were listed for today.

Power and Deceptive Plays Warner's Offense

By Associated Press

Philadelphia, Sept. 7—Glenn (Pop) Warner's "Pets"—the football plays his powerhouse grid combinations have used successfully for 40 years—are going to furnish a big part in the attack of his second Temple University eleven—a team he believes will be far stronger than the first he coached at the North Philadelphia institution a year ago.

Although "Pop" is making some concessions to progress of the years in the game, especially in the forward pass as an offensive bet, he is firmly convinced that the power plays and deception attacks which have sent his squads to fame in the years gone by are as effective as ever.

"I am certain," he said today at Temple's pre-season training camp, "that many of my 'pet' plays, used at Pittsburgh and Stanford with considerable success, will work for us this season.

"We tried them last year, but I didn't have the wherewithal to execute them."

9-GAME SCHEDULE

Despite a stiff nine-game schedule, and the loss of two potential backfield stars for the season, Warner figures his 40-man squad will have a more successful campaign than the 1933 group, which won five games in eight starts.

"Things are looking up at Temple," he contends. "I think we will be a lot stronger than in 1933, even though we will be forced to rebuild the forward wall."

That forward wall construction, incidentally, is no easy problem. Although most of the material is generally fair, the tackle situation —with only one outstanding pre-season candidate—is bound to give the coaching staff plenty of worry, but the gridiron's "Old Fox" is not especially anxious about it.

"Our squad is more experienced and the average weight is a few pounds more than last season," he points out, "so I am of the opinion that we can look for a much stronger combination.

"Then, too, the lack of capable passers hindered Temple last season, but this year we have four or five backs who can really flip the ball.

WILL USE PASS

"Like the other college teams, we are going to use the pass more than in previous campaigns, but not in preference to either the power attack or deception plays.

"Although we have lost Ed Neimann, fullback, and Bobby Norton, a left-halfback who could outrun any ball carrier on the squad, the outlook for the season is much brighter than when I assumed the tutoring duties last September."

Neimann, a Portland, Ore., resident, suffered blood poisoning during the summer vacation. Norton, who hails from San Francisco, has left college. But Warner has at least eight other promising ball-carriers, including four holdovers from 1933, and he is convinced that if the tackle situation clears itself the 1934 season will be highly satisfactory.

The schedule follows:

Sept. 29, Virginia Poly; Oct. 6, Texas A. and M., night; Oct. 13, Indiana; Oct. 19, West Virginia, night; Oct. 27, Marquette at Milwaukee; Nov. 3, Holy Cross; Nov. 10, Carnegie Tech; Nov. 24, Villanova; Nov. 29, Bucknell.

Rival Redskin Teams Meet at Dilboy

By Walter Kiley

Boston's Redskins are giving a 1934 "world premiere" at Dilboy Field on Sunday afternoon.

It will be a pre-season game with two rival teams of Redskins, one headed by Cliff Battles and the other by Ernie Pinckert, battling it out in a full regulation game wherein none of the elements of real gridiron warfare will be lacking.

The teams are to be termed the Battles Battlers and the Pinckert Panthers. And inasmuch as many positions for the coming season hang in the balance, there should be action throughout every moment of the four periods.

Coach Lone Star Dietz is using this medium to get a true line of his talent in the heat of actual gridiron play. For the time is near at hand when he must cut his squad to the league player limit.

There is to be an admission charge of 25 cents, the proceeds to go to the Dilboy Post, V. F. W. Welfare Fund.

One week from Sunday the Redskins open their league season against Pittsburgh at the Smoky City, so that Sunday's stars will stand the best chance of being listed among the starters of the September 15 opening.

SOUTHPAW'S 72 FAILS TO WIN

Sandy Burr Country Club, Wayland, Sept. 7—A par round of 72, carded in the driving rain, failed to carry Spencer Braynard to victory here this morning in the Left Handers' golf championship of New England semifinals!

Tom J. Foley of the Worcester Country Club shot an excellent 73 medal and downed Braynard, 2 and 1 to enter the finals.

Roy Replogle of Sandy Burr had an easier time of it as he toppled Brice Evans of Brookline, 5 and 4 in the other semifinals. Finals went on this afternoon.

Braynard, who plays from the Weathersfield, Conn., C. C., was medalist in this tournament, and his upset after racing around in par figures was surprising.

OL' RACE GERM MOST NOXIOUS IN SPORTS

By Dave Egan

Rockingham Park, N. H., Sept. 7—A fight camp was always Colonel Egan's idea of a dizzy, daffy place. And then came the race horses to New England, to inspire new dizziness and daffiness in these parts.

Here, and at Narragansett Park, too, you will find both the cream and the crumbs, the upper and lower strata of society. The fuzzy Joes and the Wideners, all mingled in a common horde, all sharing a fever that comes with gambling.

Mr. Arthur Brisbane, the great editorial writer, told the story of all race track habitues many a year ago.

A visitor went to New York, and was taken around and about the town. He was shown the home of John Jacob Astor, and informed that the gentleman knew nothing about horses. Then he took a peek at Willie K. Vanderbilt's mansion, and was told that Willie K. didn't know anything about horses either.

So he went down to the Bowery, and the most disreputable bum on a street where bums formerly abounded was pointed out to the visitor. "There," said the guide, "is the smartest horseman in the city of New York."

SANDE ON JOCKEYS

Earl Sande, once the greatest jockey in America, tells with many another veteran jockey that the riders are not given sufficient development in this fast age.

It is the same story in the fight business. Many years ago, a fighter served a hard apprenticeship, often spending several years in the preliminary ranks. Now, however, they are rushed into main bouts while slightly damp behind the ears.

The same holds true of jockeys, according to Sande.

"They simply haven't had the schooling and the experience. Experience is just as important for a jockey as it is for any other athlete, for it rates as one of the most hazardous sports in the world."

RESURRECTION SHOWS

There was a good deal of jubilation when Resurrection, a Sande trained horse, won the third here in the Thursday meeting. The brown gelding had to do a lot of running to win, for he was shuffled all over the race course before winning by a nose.

Sande is one of the grand veterans of the game, and he promises to be as great a success as a trainer as he was when riding. He was as eminent in his field as Babe Ruth in baseball, or Bill Tilden in tennis, or Bobby Jones in golf, and the little man is still either there or thereabouts.

PORT OF BOSTON

By WILLIAM F. MAGUIRE

European passengers in the past have related interesting experiences, but none were as unique as those of two Boston University students who arrived on the Cunard-Anchor liner Caledonia from Glasgow and Belfast. They are Miss Barbara Cox of Nonantum street, Newton, and Miss Rhoda Work, of Echo street, Brockton. Here is their story:

"We arrived in Glasgow on June 11 and set out to tour Scotland on bicycles. We covered more than 900 miles on this trip. We slept in fields, on an onion bed, under a truck and in barns.

"In Lossiemouth we met Ramsay MacDonald and visited his summer home. When he offered us a cigarette we refused and he was surprised.

"The biggest thrill we got was when the captain allowed us to pilot the boat part way from Belfast to Ayer."

CUBAN TROOPS RULE 3 TOWNS

By International News Service

Vavana, Sept. 7—Virtual martial law was established in the important city of Santiago de Cuba and the towns of Palma Soriano and Manzanillo today in the wake of student disorders of revolutionary character.

Military authorities took charge following the disorders, which were staged as a protest against the killing of two student terrorists, Ivo Fernandez and Rodolfo Sanchez. The demonstrators also demanded execution of Lieutenant Jorge Powell, under arrest pending investigation of the dual killings.

Alarm spread and most business houses closed their doors.

VALLEE SCORES 'CRANK' SUIT

New York, Sept. 9—Rudy Vallee in a Supreme Court affidavit filed here characterized a $250,000 breach of promise suit brought against him by Frances Singer of Denver as "crank litigation" brought by "an unfortunate girl who needs a physician rather than a lawyer."

Vallee received an order from Justice Edgar J. Lauer requiring Miss Singer to post a $250 bond as security for costs, since she is a non-resident. Vallee's affidavit said:

"Professional artists such as myself who have reached any sort of public recognition are constantly subjected to annoyances on the part of cranks."

The orchestra leader added he understood Miss Singer had gone so far as to obtain a marriage license in Denver so that she might marry him.

Unfit Houses Must Be Made Habitable

THERE are no slums in Boston—only "sub-standard areas." That's official now that the City Council has ratified Mayor Mansfield's use of the latter term, and deplored the use of the former by the British city planners who have been Boston's guests.

Long ago Shakespeare wrote a very brief and a very effective editorial on this point. He said:

The fact is that there are several areas in the city covered by buildings that would be dignified even by the name of "tenement." The State Housing Board long ago recommended that they be razed.

Every reasonable person sees that they are potential breeders of disease and crime and disaster. If a serious conflagration ever broke out in one of these sections there might easily be a terrible toll of human lives.

AS it is, the neighborhoods are not fit for human habitation. They cripple minds as well as bodies. They are the centers in which lawless gangs have their origin.

This reflects no discredit on the persons who are forced to live there. They are among our best citizens for the simple reason that they have made such a marvelous showing in the face of the surroundings that handicap them. They are entitled to something better.

During the last few years almost every major American city has launched extensive slum clearing projects. Why not Boston?

Federal aid was called for in some cases by New York and Chicago and other metropolitan centers. Private philanthropy has played a large part in these programs. And in more than one case it was considered good, hard, horse-sense business to replace tenements by model apartment blocks. Chicago boasts of one very fine development of this kind.

But Boston, which—to its shame—is studied by engineering schools as a model for slum clearance, has never carried one of these projects beyond the blue print stage.

Eight or ten of them have been proposed in the last year or so, but so far not one cent—public or private—has been raised to translate drawings into brick and mortar.

THE most recent project to be turned down by the ERA was East Boston's Neptune Gardens. We have no desire to argue the merits of an individual case, but it does seem that Boston should get at least proportionately as much Federal money for work of this nature as is paid out so generously to New York and Chicago.

But whether it is done with private funds or with public, Boston owes it to itself to raise the standard of its "sub-standard areas." Those who disagree might ponder a recent statement of Viscount Snowden:

> "It is no use talking to the people about their political liberty if they are living in slums."

War Against Noises

Nationwide comment has followed the latest phase of New York's war against noises. This has developed rubber-tired milk wagons. Greater Boston saw the first rubber-tired milk wagons make their appearance some years ago.

And Greater Boston folks are very noise-conscious. This has been demonstrated anew in the past few days.

Somerville residents appeared in court last week seeking an injunction against a plant which they declared disturbed their slumbers. At the same time Allston residents were filing a petition on Beacon Hill, asking alleged noise nuisances be abated in a railroad freight yard in their district.

Our politicians have created offices in connection with nearly everything under the sun. But to date they have seemingly overlooked the possibility of establishing a salaried corps of noise suppressors! The taxpayers for this will be mostly thankful.

New State Police

Uniformed in bright blue, there are 45 new State Troopers on the highways of Massachusetts this week. They are graduates of the State Police School that has just been brought to a close.

With their addition the Massachusetts constabulary, under Public Safety Commissioner Needham, now numbers 290 men. And since its establishment 12 years ago, it has grown to be the peer of any similar organization.

Trained in the latest police procedure, quartered in barracks and under a central command, these men move with the precision of the military rather than the police.

And that is the added value that they have beyond protecting the lives and the property of Massachusetts citizens. They are an example for every local police force.

Some of these may follow the example unwillingly—but they dare not lag too far behind the efficient State Police.

Guns for Radio Cars

> "You have always given a lot of valuable space toward bettering the condition of city employes, especially the police and fire departments. We are very grateful to you and we appreciate the wonderful aid given us by the Hearst newspapers. But there is one more little thing that I would like to see the Hearst papers take up the cudgels for, and carry through to a successful conclusion.
> "That is, THE ARMING OF ALL POLICE RADIO CARS WIH SUBMACHINE GUNS.
> "I think we deserve at least an even break with the bandits. Too many have been shot down when a little care and preparation could have averted it. The cost would not be so very great when you figure the good effects in morale, more fear to the gunmen, fewer stick-ups, etc."

We respectfully suggest that this deserves the careful consideration of the proper authorities.

The Old Job Again!

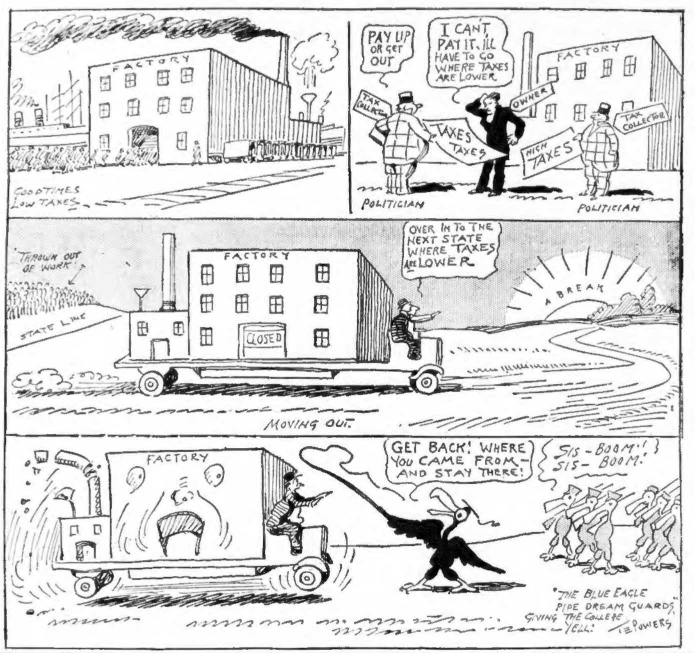
The Coast Guard is back on its old job—chasing the rum runner.

The battle to stop the influx of untaxed and questionable liquor is again assuming some of its pre-Repeal proportions.

It is good therefore to know that the Coast Guard, the Department of Justice, the customs officials, the Collector of Internal Revenue and other government agencies in the Boston area are working in close co-operation.

Now that we have a legitimate, revenue-producing liquor trade to protect, the battle against the rum smuggler seems even more important to us than it was in Prohibition days.

NRA–No Running Away -:- -:- By T. E. Powers



Listen, World! -:- By Elsie Robinson

Elsie Robinson

After the Civil War there came a dreadful interlude of upheaval and confusion. The Negroes, newly liberated from slavery, didn't know what to do with their freedom. They had had no training in those independent professions which white men pursued. They did not even know how to plan life coolly, deliberately. Their thoughts and emotions were a violent chaos of yearning and resentment.

They had vast desires—but no definite goals or disciplined controls. As a consequence they went haywire—raised Cain with their own lives, and America's. And for many years their great strength instead of being an asset was a menace.

It seems to me that American women are in much the same situation today. This—though it is said in all friendliness—will not be a popular statement. Yet resentment is, I think, proof of the thing I'm saying—

WE AMERICAN WOMEN ARE "ALL DRESSED UP" WITH OUR NEW PREROGATIVES OF SUFFRAGE, CO-EDUCATION AND INDUSTRIAL EQUALITY —BUT WE DON'T KNOW WHERE TO GO! AND INSTEAD OF STANDING STEADY UNTIL WE GET OUR BEARINGS, WE'RE RAISING CAIN!

And this isn't true only of a limited, intellectual class; it is true of all classes. I hardly know a bright woman under 40 who is calm or contented with her lot.

I set this age limitation because the women over 40 were fairly well oriented in life before the great changes occurred. They had a chance to see that the seeming handicaps of life in the old-fashioned home were coupled with very real advantages.

Today, women over 40 are either spinelessly resigned and "enjoying their miseries," or are shrewdly mixing those ancient prerogatives with new privileges, and thereby attaining real power. But the intelligent under 40 are, almost without exception, all in-a-lather.

Over what? They don't know themselves. If they're confined in homes, they want to be in offices. If they're in offices, they want to be somewhere else. They can't get along with their husbands. Or without 'em.

They think they're too good for housework; yet they can do nothing else. Given training for something else—where can they find a job? And are the jobs which they desire any less arduous or any more distinguished than the housework they despise?

Mind you, I'm for suffrage and industrial equality—for any form of progress which will help women to lead larger, more useful lives. But first I'm for a clearer realization of what a larger, more useful life really is.

I know a young woman who screamed violently and incessantly for five long years against spending her days in a pretty little kitchen with blue and white checked gingham curtains at the window, peasant pottery on the wall and a stew bubbling on a shiny range.

She took the course—spent a hectic year in New York's Bohemia—then sat her down and achieved soul-satisfying fame (at one cent per word) by writing about a pretty little kitchen with blue and white checked gingham curtains at the window, peasant pottery on the wall and a stew bubbling on a shiny range. Now I ask you!

EASIER ON HUSBAND

Yes, I know; the girls are going to be plenty mad at me for saying these things—but I can't for the life of me, see that it's a particle more emancipated to go around yelling at committees of club women than it is to stay at home as grandma did and yell at one husband. Only, of course, it's a heap easier on the husband.

A friend of mine has a word for Us Modern Femmes and I think it's a pip. "Yearners"—he calls us. Yearners—for what? That's the point.

There's nothing wrong in yearning per se. It is, indeed, the take-off of all noble human achievement.

But what do we emancipated women hope to achieve by our yearning? And, after we've achieved it, will we have anything better than we could have had if we'd stayed at home and played the game we know?

Someone to Trust -:- By Winifred Black

Winifred Black

The sea was dancing along the shore like a Russian ballet in full swing. There was a breeze that made a singing harp of every tree along the road, and we sat parked in the roadster watching the world go by. Tired old men, weary old women, gay youth, comfortable middle age, and then all at once the three boys.

Two little fellows and a big boy—just a typical big boy, all legs and arms and knuckles and wrists and teeth and unruly hair.

The two small boys skipped along on each side of him, trying so hard to take long manly strides and failing rather touchingly, it seemed to me.

They had been talking something over, the three boys, and now the big boy settled the whole matter:

GRANDMA KNEW

Big boy, I thought, what would you give a few years from now to have somebody worship you as you are worshipped now?

"Sure"—how sure they all were. Why, there was no question about it at all. Big boy said it was "sure," whatever it was, and that was that, and no more worry about it.

Don't you wish you had someone who could say "sure" like that and make you believe it, when you begin to feel a little uncomfortable about life or death or whatever?

I wonder if that wasn't what made grandma look so peaceful and contented.

She didn't have a thing to worry her—not a thing at all. Do you remember the time they had the Indian scare up in Wisconsin and all the neighbors crowded into their wagons and their queer old buggies and phaetons and ran away?

Grandma sat on the porch and waved them a gay goodby.

"You won't be gone long," she cried, and when they asked her if she wasn't afraid to stay, she laughed:

"Why, don't you suppose Jeffery would have let me know if there was any danger?" said grandma.

IN RANKS OF WAR

Jeffery was her young husband, far away in the front ranks in the war, but that made no difference to grandma.

Jeffery knew and Jeffery would always look after her.

She went through life that way and most of the time she was right.

Her Jeffery did look after her —and why should she waste her time worrying about his business?

It would be sort of nice to have a Jeffery to believe and trust, wouldn't it, honestly now?

"Sure," that's what you'd say, isn't it, big boy?

THE PRICE OF FAME

("The heavyweight champion gets no privacy at all."—Max Baer.)

Without any doubt, to be followed about
By a fawning, fanatical crowd
Sets the nerves all ajar, but that's how people are,
And it ought to make anyone proud.
A champion at best is allowed little rest,
But remember it won't be so long
Till some fellow who wants to be mobbed in his haunts,
Will knock you back into the throng.

It's a nuisance, I know, when you go to a show,
To be stopped by admirers who seek
For your name on a card, and it ought to be barred,
But people are horribly weak,
And they do like to camp on the path of a champ,
For a winner's the joy of their lives.
So don't whimper and moan. They will leave you alone
The minute the next champ arrives.

Now, were I so beset, not so haughty I'd get,
For behind me whenever I'd look
I should certainly see, pressing hard upon me,
Some chap with a left jab and hook
Who is after my job, to be stormed by the mob,
And the moment my vigil I slack
He'll let fly with a fist, which I cannot resist,
And I'll then have my privacy back.

Stars and Stripes

This textile strike seems to be a cut and dyed affair.

Upton Sinclair would have us believe that, so far as Tom Mooney is concerned, he will be the only governor California has had in the last twenty years who is on the up-and-Upton.

Now the truth may be told about the lion that clawed Clyde Beauty recently. Clyde had been taking the beast to a dentist instead of a chiropodist.

South Carolina has finally voted for liquor. So all's wet that that ends wet.

Human Side of the News; Maine Sets Pace

By Edwin C. Hill

"Oh, have you heard how old Maine went?
"She went hell-bent for Governor Kent
"And Tippecanoe and Tyler, too!"

It is 94 years now since the jubilant Whigs raised this shout throughout the country signifying the bolt of the Pine Tree State from Van Buren's Democrats to the party of William Henry Harrison.

That happened in the year 1840, the date of the famous "hard cider-log cabin" campaign, and every two years since we have been reminded "as Maine goes so goes the nation."

It isn't exactly true and it is not borne out by the cold figures, but we hear it nevertheless, and are hearing it now as September 10 draws near, the day on which Maine will elect a United States senator, a governor and its quota of three Representatives to Congress.

THIS AN OFF YEAR

The Democrats had their chance in 1932 for the first time in the memory of living man, to seize upon the Maine prophecy and to see it fulfilled beyond all expectations in the presidential election. The chances are that this year the Republicans will get some comfort from the returns.

The Democrats, especially the urbane James Aloysius Farley, concede nothing, but precedent is against them. For them to retain the governorship and two seats in Congress would be an amazing victory. And they could count it as a moral triumph if only they lose everything, but keep the Republican margin down to a negligible figure.

This is an off year and in every off-year congressional election in the past 60, the party of the President has lost seats in Congress. The number varies with times and conditions. For example the oil scandals cost the Harding administration 77 seats in 1922, whereas when prosperity came along in 1926, the Coolidge administration got by with but nine defeats.

A survey of the history of Maine elections made by Columbia University in 1930 showed that in off years the state is a poor barometer of the congressional lineup, being wrong on an average of 12 seats.

The record for Presidential years is somewhat better, for in 17 out of the past 24 Presidential elections, the party which elected the Governor of Maine in September elected the new President of the United States two months later.

ABOUT "HAM" FISH

"Political sages could do a slightly better, though still not accurate job, of predicting party strength in the House on off-years, if they would wholly disregard the Maine returns and place their trust in other simple formulae of the rule-of-thumb type. Such a rule, for example, could be derived from the habit of the American electorate to deflate administration strength in in the House of Representatives in off-year elections."

Speaking of Congressional contests, there is an interesting one in President Roosevelt's home district in the Hudson River Valley. The personable Hamilton Fish, Jr., who has been as critical of the New Deal as he is of Communism, is a candidate for re-election on the Republican ticket.

On the record of the three New York State counties which make up the Congressions' district, he should win, but still the contest takes on a bit of the color of a referendum on the administration.

"Ham" Fish is forty-six now, although it seems only yesterday that as the strongest man in Harvard and captain of the football team he was out on the gridiron meeting the bull-like rushes of the famous Ted Coy of Yale.

A neighbor of the President's, his background is much like that of Franklin D. Roosevelt. Not only is he a Harvard man, but he is of Revolutionary stock. He won a Croix de Guerre in France as captain of a company of Negro troops, and since his return, has spent most of his time in Congress sponsoring veterans' legislation and hunting the reds.

FROM TROPICAL TRAMP

My friend, the tropical tramp, previously referred to here, tells me that a lot of holders of certain sound American bonds ought to make a pilgrimage to the zoo with some nice presents for little Racket, the baby llama just born there.

They might not be drawing dividends if it weren't for his folks. The llamas just above made the great Cerro de Pasco Mining Company, says my friend.

Up there, nearly 15,000 feet, in Peru, thousands and thousands of them do the work of the vast gold and silver operations, packing ore and food and supplies, on a wage of handful of maize a day.

Up to 1850, these great ore deposits had been worked by a king who enslaved both Indians and llamas. Somewhere around $450,000,000 has been taken out of this plateau. It was mostly silver for a century or so, but now the output is turning more to copper. American capital, concentrated chiefly in Boston, took it over 30 or 40 years ago.

The llama is the South American camel, a subsidiary of the old, established camel firm, sometimes known as the wild guanaco, confined mostly to Southern Peru, but known elsewhere. He gauges his load-carrying limit at about 100 pounds.

He is amiable and tractable, but let anybody crowd that weight limit and here's what happens: He makes a dreadful face and exudes saliva of a truly distressing odor in the direction of his driver. He keeps this up until they lessen the load.

This expectorating habit has been the llama's defense against too much exploitation. But he's quite fair about it, carrying patiently his load of 100 pounds. He can go four or five days without water, and much of the up-building of Southern Peru is his work.

This Code Business

THE Democratic pledge, in its 1932 platform, to take the Government out of business seems to have been "fulfilled," and with a vengeance, by doing exactly the reverse.

It brings to mind the famous chapter of Dickens, in which he describes the Whole Science of Government as the art of "How Not to Do It."

> "It is true," wrote Dickens, "that every new government, coming in because they had upheld a certain thing as necessary to be done, were no sooner come in than they applied their utmost faculties to discovering how not to do it.
> "From the moment a general election was over, every returned man who had been raving (on the stump) because it hadn't been done, and who had been asking the friends of the honorable gentleman in the opposite interest on pain of impeachment to tell him why it hadn't been done, and who had been asserting that it must be done, and who had been pledging himself that it should be done, began to devise, How It Was Not to Be Done."

Where could words more apt be found to describe this betrayal by the Democratic Party of itself—this apostasy to its doctrines and its promises?

THE Government today is not only in business up to the hilt, but immersed, submerged, and sunk with all hands—in business!

In a striking article by Arthur Krock, in the New York Times, the extent to which our Government has thrust itself into the entire field of the people's business is revealed in a way that all may appreciate.

He tells the story of two men who wrote letters to Washington, one addressed to the Commodity Credit Corporation, seeking a loan of $5000, and the other asking the Civilian Conservation Corps to give him a job.

> "One week later," writes Mr. Krock, "the man who sought the loan found himself chopping wood in the forest, and the intended wood-chopper was staring at a $5000 check from Washington in his mail."

This reliable correspondent gives other illustrations of the GOVERNMENT IN BUSINESS.

ONE day a man went to NRA headquarters and said, "I make diapers. Where do I go?"

They sent him to Cotton Goods, but Cotton Goods, after much study, sent him to Cotton Textiles on the ground that this was a manufactured article.

But Cotton Textiles could not deal with him because its authority extended to adults only, so he went to the Children's Division, where new perplexities arose.

Did his application belong to Children's Underwear or Overwear Clothes, it being observed, as is commonly known, that a baby may have a diaper for his only garment.

The man finally reached Children's Underwear, as related by Mr. Krock, and here it was decided, after much conferring, that there was a lack of the necessary authority.

Finally the applicant was referred to General Hugh S. Johnson, the Chief Federal Administrator of the National Recovery Administration! Here at last he obtained the long sought and formal action of the National Government of the United States!
